House Kills Truman Plan For Welfare Department

Cabinet-Rank Agency For Health, Security And Education Work Voted Down, 249-71

By Mary Spargo
Post Reporter

By a vote of 249 to 71 the House yesterday killed President Truman's plan to create a new Department of Health, Education and Security.

The vote came on a resolution of disapproval introduced by Representative Clare Hoffman (R., Mich.).

Lined up against the Chief Executive's plan to raise the Federal Security Agency to cabinet level was a nearly solid phalanx of Republicans and Southern Democrats.

But many Democrats from other parts of the United States were likewise opposed to the creation of the new Department. Some of that opposition was reflected in the large absenteeism in Democratic ranks, some of whose members had confided to reporters they did not propose to vote because of personal opposition to FSA Administrator Oscar Ewing.

Major tip-off on the extent and cause of the Southern opposition came in a speech by Representative Wingate H. Lucas (D., Tex.), who said the program seemed designed to give more power to Ewing. And why, he demanded, should we give more power to the man "we do not trust?"

The GOP attack on the proposal followed two main lines: (1) that the plan was not in accord with the Hoover Commission recommendations and (2) that it increased the danger of "socialized medicine."

The plan met its most strenuous opposition from leaders of organized medicine and dentistry who claimed it would subordinate health to the dictates of "welfare officials."

It was the first time this session that the House has rejected a reorganization plan submitted by Mr. Truman. The Senate has killed six of the plans, the latest being the proposal to place the Reconstruction Finance Corporation under the Commerce Department.

FSA officials had believed the program would have comparatively

Six More Polio Victims in Area Raise Total to 28

Six new polio cases were reported yesterday in the Washington area, bringing this year's total to 28.

Over the weekend the District Health Department reported three victims at Children's Hospital. They are: Five-year-old boy, 1500 block Simms dr. se; three-year-old boy, 1800 block 5th st. nw; seven-year-old boy, 1600 block Park rd. nw. The District total now stands at 13. This date last year four District cases had been reported.

Prince Georges County reported its fourth 1950 case, a 15-year-old boy, 5100 block Byers ave., Boulevard Heights, also at Children's.

Arlington Health Department listed the county's third victim, a 31-year-old married woman, 800 block S. Harrison st., at Gallinger Hospital.

Fairfax County reported a 10-year-old boy, who lives in Dunn Loring, as its sixth polio victim.

Poison Dose Killed Girl, 17, Says Coroner

Fairfax Beauty's Death Believed a Suicide; Came From S. America

The death of beautiful Josephine Guzman, of Bogota, Columbia, at Alexandria Hospital Sunday, was attributed yesterday to a dose of ant poison.

Dr. John A. Sims, Alexandria coroner, said he would issue a certificate of death by suicide.

The 17-year-old girl was pronounced dead on arrival at the hospital about 4:30 a. m. Sunday. Three hours earlier, she was discharged from the same hospital after her stomach was pumped out. Hospital attendants said she appeared to have symptoms of poisoning.

According to the coroner, an analysis of the contents of the 17-year-old girl's stomach after death revealed traces of poison similar to that found by Fairfax County police in a partially-filled bottle at her home.

She lived in the fashionable Belle Haven house of her brother and sister-in-law, Mr. and Mrs. Guillermo Rozo.

Through Rozo, a civil engineer employed by a private concern here, police said they learned Miss Guzman and her sister had a "petty" quarrel Saturday night. After the argument, police said, Miss Guzman left the living room and walked into the kitchen, where the ant poison later was found.

A short time later, Rozo told police, the young woman became ill and hysterical. She was taken to the hospital and, despite her protests that she had taken only a soft drink, her stomach was pumped out.

After receiving the treatment, she apparently recovered. She returned to the home in good spirits, police quoted Rozo as saying. Around 4 a. m., however, she was seized by chills and became unconscious. She was dead when she again entered the hospital.

Colonel Accused Of Firing Shots At Two Youths

A warrant for the arrest of an Army colonel, accused of shooting at two youths from the deck of his cabin cruiser on the Maryland side of the Potomac River near Alexandria, was turned over to Prince Georges County police yesterday.

The colonel was identified as George H. Sparhawk of 2401 S. Culpeper st., Arlington, in the warrant issued Sunday by Judge George N. Cox of Oxon Hill, Md.

He is accused of aiming a .45-caliber automatic and firing twice at the boys as they circled the cruiser in their outboard. The boys said they saw a bullet hit the water.

The youths involved are Herschel Williams, jr., 18, of 1 W. Glendale ave.; Alexandria, son of the manager of the Alexandria Gazette print shop, and Robert Brixner, 17, son of Capt. R. C. Brixner, U. S. N., of 604 Melrose st., Alexandria.

Controversial Airlines Deal Reported Approved by Truman

By The Associated Press

President Truman was reported last night to have approved the proposed sale of American Overseas Airlines to its Atlantic-crossing competitor, Pan American World Airways.

It was learned from persons close to the situation that Mr. Truman conditioned the approval with an order that Transworld Airline, the third United States transatlantic operator, be permitted to compete with Pan American to London and Frankfurt and that Pan American be permitted to serve Paris and Rome, which now are served exclusively by TWA.

The President's reported order would overturn the original decision of the Civil Aeronautics Board. It was understood to have voted 3 to 2 to reject the measure. However, the President has final say on all matters involving international air services and has overruled the board in important cases in the past.

The projected sale was originally written late in 1948 as a stock-exchange deal, but later was modified on a basis of $17,450,000 cash.

It has been one of the ... bitterly fought cases in the CAB's 12-year history. TWA has fought it on the grounds it would add more size to Pan American, already the world's largest international airline, and thus would make still more difficult TWA's efforts to operate profitably on its 20,000-mile route through Europe and the Middle East to India.

Sumner Pike Confirmed To AEC Post

55-24 Approval Includes 17 GOP Senators; Margin Comes as Surprise

By Alfred Friendly
Post Reporter

By a startling and overwhelming vote, 55 to 24, the Senate yesterday confirmed Sumner T. Pike for another four-year term as Atomic Energy Commissioner.

The better than 2-to-1 vote came in the face of a majority recommendation last week of the Senate members of the Congressional Atomic Committee against Pike's renomination. Gallery observers had believed he would be confirmed, but most thought the marmargin would be much closer.

Opponents of Pike, led by Senator Hickenlooper (R., Iowa) and other Republican members of the Congressional Committee, insisted that the Maine Republican did not "measure up" to the requirements of the important job.

Gets 17 GOP Votes

Two-thirds of the Senate, however, apparently found such charges entirely too vague and too general to be convincing. Furthermore, Pike was backed by both Senators from his own State, with the result that almost half of the Republicans joined with the Democrats to vote in his favor.

Of 36 Republicans voting, 19 were against and 17 were for him. Of 43 Democrats, all but five voted for Pike.

Such specific charges as Hickenlooper and his colleagues leveled against Pike boiled down to these:

1. He aligned himself with "loose security practices" in permitting temporary clearance of several thousand Atomic Energy Commission employes before FBI investigation of them, and with respect to the AEC's research fellowship program.
2. He favored distribution of radioactive isotopes to foreign countries.
3. He favored a ten-million-dollar project bringing in a natural gas pipeline to the Oak Ridge atomic plant.
4. He "dragged his feet" on the hydrogen bomb project.
5. He had to be bludgeoned into countermanding orders to an AEC scientist who was authorized to discuss with British atomic scientists certain highly secret data.

McMahon Leads Defense

In the floor debate preceding the vote, Senator McMahon (D., Conn.), Congressional Atomic Committee chairman, led Pike's defense.

He pointed out that the first three charges had been dealt with at great extent more than a year ago, during the course of Hickenlooper's "incredible mismanagement" investigation of the AEC and that the allegations were not sustained.

As for "dragging his feet" on the H-bomb, McMahon read a letter from Secretary of Defense

Truman Calls Senate Leaders To 4th 2-Party Meeting Today

By Robert C. Albright
Post Reporter

Top Democratic and Republican members of the Senate Foreign Relations and Appropriations Committees were invited to the White House today for the fourth in a series of bipartisan consultations.

The White House did not announce the subject of the meeting, but a spokesman said it "has nothing directly to do with Korea."

Senators on the guest list said they were not told what the conference was about but were asked to arrange to stay a half-hour.

Important moves in the Far Eastern situation have been announced after each of three preceding conferences, but leaders said they knew of no important new steps under way.

Members of the Foreign Affairs and Armed Services Committees figured in two of the earlier bipartisan meetings on Korea. Last weekend top members of the Armed Services Committee figured in a similar conference on the draft.

Today's conference was scheduled for 11 a. m. Senators invited included Foreign Relations Chairman Tom Connally (D., Tex.), Walter F. George (D., Ga.), Alexander Wiley (R., Wis.), H. Alexander Smith (R., N. J.), and Appropriations Chairman Kenneth McKellar (D., Tenn.), Carl Hayden (D., Ariz.), Styles Bridges (R., N. H.) and Chan Gurney (R., S. Dak.)

At the Capitol, meanwhile, two leading Republican Senators called on the President to take additional steps to consolidate national unity:

1. Senator William F. Knowland (R., Calif.) urged Mr. Truman to establish "a Government of national unity for as long as the crisis lasts" by inviting Republicans into his Cabinet.
2. Senator Margaret Chase Smith (R., Me.) asked Mr. Truman to make a personal report to a joint session of Congress because "it is imperative people be fully informed by the President on the Korean situation without further delay."

Administration spokesmen at the Capitol said privately they believed both proposals are premature. For the President to appoint a "coalition Cabinet," one said, might imply that we are going into a global war, whereas the Korean conflict might not lead to one.

Similarly, a joint session of Congress, addressed by the President, might contribute to a war hysteria, the same source said.

After a "Big Four" legislative conference at the White House, leaders continued to speculate on

District Due To Send 100 In First Call

Maryland's Quota Likely About 300; Army and Air Chiefs Of Staff Off to Tokyo

By John G. Norris
Post Reporter

The Department of Defense yesterday directed the immediate drafting of 20,000 men into the Army.

National Selective Service Headquarters was asked to call up this number of men "at the earliest possible date" to build up forces required for the Korean war. Draft officials said the first men could be inducted in about 60 days and that all would come out of the older registrants—those aged 25, 24 and possibly 23—now classified 1A.

While it will be a day or so before Selective Service works out State quotas, officials said last night that on the basis of wartime formulas, a 20,000-man national call would mean drafting 100 men from the District of Columbia and 300 from Maryland. An estimate from Virginia officials was not immediately available.

Next step is expected to be mobilizing of selected units of the Army, Navy, Air Force and Marine Corps organized reserve.

While decisions are being made on a day-to-day basis, authoritative sources last night said the present plan is not to ask the President to order them into service, but to "put the heat on" badly needed groups to volunteer en masse. To date, the call for volunteers has been on an individual basis.

But from the way things have been going, the compulsory call-up of reservists or a National Guard division or two would surprise no one. Department of Defense spokesmen had been saying until late yesterday that no draft calls would be forthcoming until the result of the appeal for volunteers was determined.

To get away from this constantly changing, emergency planning and enable the Joint Chiefs of Staff to map a firm expansion program, two of its members left by air last night for top-level conferences with Gen. Douglas MacArthur in Tokyo.

Gens. J. Lawton Collins and Hoyt S. Vandenberg, Army and Air Force chiefs of staff, took off for the Far East to get a first-hand report of what degree of mobilization is needed for the current job.

Adm. Forrest Sherman, chief of naval operations, it was said, did not go as he has two high-ranking Navy admirals on the scene to advise of what is needed. While naval operations in the current campaign are under MacArthur's command, they are by their very nature not as closely under the Far East commander's immediate direction as the more intimately intwined ground-air fighting.

In still another development of the contantly changing war picture, the Air Force's Tactical Air Commander said that fighter

Hershey Reveals 1,467,000 in 1-A; Machinery Geared

By Sam Stavisky
Post Reporter

The Selective Service System can produce 300,000 inductees for the armed forces within 90 days, Maj. Gen. Lewis B. Hershey disclosed yesterday.

The draft director revealed that there is presently at hand a pool of 1,467,000 young men, between the ages of 19 and 26, who are classified as 1-A, available for induction. These men are for the most part single non-veterans.

It will take approximately 60 days to process the first call for selectees, Hershey said, because of the requirements of the law, the rights of the draftees, and the fact that Selective Service—only semi-active for the past 18 months—will have to start the machinery virtually from scratch.

Once the Nation's draft boards are back in full operation, however, selectees can be produced in a matter of 40 to 42 days, just as they were during the war, General Hershey said.

Orders for full revival of the 3600 local boards across the country went out to the state Selective Service directors last Friday. Last of the postwar draft calls was issued in January, 1949, and since then most of the boards have reduced activities drastically. Forty-one percent of the local draft board offices were not open more than eight hours a week for the past year, according to Hershey.

In carrying out the Defense Department's call for 20,000 draftees yesterday, the Selective Service System will first reach out for the 1-As in the 23 and 24-year-old age brackets, Hershey announced. As more men are required, 1-As will

Use of 'Napalm' Spells Flaming Death in Korea

The word "Napalm" in Gen. Douglas MacArthur's communique yesterday spelled death and destruction for lots of North Korean men and equipment.

"Napalm was used with reported excellent results," the communique read.

Used in aerial bombs and flame throwers, it is a mixture of aluminum soap and such inflammables as naphtha and gasoline. It forms a jelly that clings where it hits and burns with a white heat. It was developed by this country in World War II.

Napalm is employed in flame throwers against pillboxes or tanks. The liquid fire curls in through gun or observation slits, sticking to whatever is inside.

Dropped by planes in bomb form, as is being done in Korea, Napalm covers wide areas with long-lasting flames.

Five Days Behind Reds' Lines, Two Noncoms Tell of Escape

An Advanced American Command Post in Korea, July 9 (Delayed) (AP).—Sergt. David Colombe, 34, a Sioux Indian from Winner, S. Dak., and Corpl. Van Bullman, 21, of Alexander, N. C., walked into this command post today and reported they had been playing hide and seek with North Korean troops since July 5.

Stranded deep in enemy territory by a Red tank penetration, they had slipped along a mountain ridge between valleys full of Communist soldiers to get back to U. S. forces.

With them was Capt. Cho Dong On, 24, one of five South Korean soldiers the Americans ran across who also were trying to get back to friendly troops.

"We went out July 4 and they attacked on the fifth," related Bullman. "We were on these two hills," he said, pointing to his knees, "and they came through just like this." He sliced his hands between his knees.

Bullman said Americans fired bazookas at the 32 tanks in the Red column, but "never stopped one of them."

"We knew their infantry would be along behind, so all of us got on one hill."

The Red infantry passed on both sides of the hill and all but encircled it.

"There must have been 1000 of them," the corporal continued. "The only way out was covered by crossfire—and that's where we got out."

Bullman said enemy fire spat at them every time they moved. Re-

Heaviest Air Blows Yet Are Rained on Enemy's Positions; 7 Yanks Murdered

Tokyo, Tuesday, July 11 (AP).—U. S. tanks clashed with North Korean armor for the first time yesterday on the plains south of Seoul and came off well in a severe battle that raged on into today.

This was announced today by a spokesman at American headquarters in Korea. The battle flamed within eight road miles of the vital Kum river on the western part of the front.

(The United Press said that American troops led by the tanks had recaptured all positions lost on Monday and had driven the North Koreans back into Chonui.

27 Killed, 94 Wounded, 245 Missing in Korea

Tokyo, Tuesday, July 11 (AP). Gen. Douglas MacArthur's Communique reported tonight that as of 6 p. m. Monday American casualties in Korea war totaled 27 killed, 94 wounded, and 245 missing.

It said the tanks were given a lion's share of the credit for "the first successful American counter-attack of the war."

(It quoted Lieut. Joe E. Griffith, of Charleston, S. C., as saying "The Commies took off like a bunch of scared rabbits when the tanks opened up."

(However, a Tokyo UP dispatch said later that "severe fighting" was still under way on Tuesday.—Eidtor's note.)

The battle in which U. S. tanks were participating appeared to be the first big engagement for American forces. Infantry was supported by tanks, artillery and withering aerial barrage from warplanes which knocked out numerous Red tanks.

In a Tuesday mid-day communique, General MacArthur's headquarters at Tokyo said North Korean troops and armor continued heavy pressure on U. S. battalions in the Chonan sector

Color TV Ready But Experts Want Only One System

A committee of independent experts yesterday said color television may be safely authorized now, but only one system should be adopted.

The report was by the Senate's Advisory Committee on Color TV, set up a year ago.

Headed by Dr. Edward U. Condon, Bureau of Standards chief, it included Newbern Smith, bureau radio expert; Stuart L. Bailey, president, Institute of Radio Engineers; William L. Everitt, University of Illinois, and Donald G. Fink, editor, Electronics Magazine.

The committee asserted:

1. Color TV can be handled within the bandwidths now assigned to black-and-white.
2. Three systems—Radio Corp. of America, Columbia Broadcasting System and Color Television, Inc., are available in the bandwidth.
3. Because of wide differences in engineering details, the three systems are "mutually exclusive—one and only one must be chosen for general licensing."

The experts avoided a choice of the three.

Pilot Called Murderer In Letter to Mother

Garden City, N. Y., July 10 (AP). The mother of an American fighter pilot in Korea has received an anonymous letter describing her son as a "murderer" and praising the Communists.

The letter, postmarked Hartford, Conn., was received July 3 by Mrs. Harold L. Wayne, of Garden City, mother of First Lieut. Robert Wayne, 24, jet fighter pilot who down two Russian-made Korean aircraft while convoying transport planes evacuating Americans from South Korea.

"I see by the paper that you are proud of your son killing other people and destroying the world of paradise," the letter said.

"The Communists are not bad people; they want all men to be equal, but those rich Yankees don't want to have them in their nest and don't want to share with the poor man, that is why Communist is fighting."

Wayne, the pilot's father said he would turn it over to the Federal Bureau of Investigation.

Wayne is manager of the Inland Marine Insurance Bureau in New York City.

Australian Miners Ask 'Hands Off Korea' Drive

Sydney, Australia, July 10 (U.P.). Leaders of the Australian Miners Federation were trying today to form a triple front with the Seamen's Union and the Waterside Workers to support the Communist "hands off Korea" campaign. All three unions are Communist-controlled.

The miners' union asked all branches to declare in favor of the triple alliance by July 28.

The attorney general, meanwhile, refused to say whether he is planning to press treason charges against members of the seamen's union who said they will refuse to transport war materials to Korea.

Honolulu, July 11 (AP).—The aircraft carrier Philippine Sea, escorted by the destroyers Hollister and Knox, steamed into Pearl Harbor today. The three were the first ships of task force "yoke" to arrive.

The escort carrier Sicily also arrived. The Sicily is ferrying planes to the Korean war zone. She sailed from San Diego last week.

Rear Adm. William F. Boon is commander of the group which has been ordered here from the West Coast to back up the Seventh Fleet in the Far East.

General Clay To Head N. Y. Civil Defense

Albany, N. Y., July 10 (U.P.).—Gen. Lucius D. Clay, who beat the Russians with the Berlin airlift, today was appointed chairman of New York State's Civilian Defense Commission.

Clay will direct the State's drive to get home defenses in order in view of the Korean crisis.

Clay said the commission would open its office in New York City Tuesday and would tackle the job of getting a voluntary organization together as its first objective.

He said the commission had not yet planned any blackouts but that "every practical aspect of the defense plan—including blackouts—will be given test runs."

Charlottesville, Va., July 10.—Peace for the rest of this century may be the result of the swift United Nations action in Korea, President Colgate W. Darden, jr., of the University of Virginia suggested today.

President Darden, a former Governor of his State, was the first speaker at the University's Institute of Public Affairs, which resumed its sessions after a lapse of eight years.

He recalled that at the start of the century the American people, intent upon their own affairs, thought they were entering a long period of unbroken peace and progress.

"In fact," he said, "there was little to suggest to the world at the turn of the century that it was entering upon the most violent period in its history."

Believes Lessons Learned

"While the halfway mark has been reached under most inauspicious circumstances, it might not be too much to hope that the signs of today are as misleading as were those of 50 years ago, and that there is a possibility, at least, that the 50 years which loom ahead of us may be spent in peace and the rehabilitation of the shattered fortunes of mankind."

His reason for confidence was that the American and other free peoples had learned the lessons of a tragic past.

"We are at this moment," he said, "engaged in war in Korea in an effort to prevent enslavement of that land. But we do not stand alone.

"With us is ranged the gathering force of other free peoples who see, as do we now, that peace is to be achieved only by concerted action. We have elected to fight under unfavorable and disadvantageous circumstances in defense of this great premise.

"If we succeed, as I believe we shall, we shall have given, by actual demonstration, a forward thrust to the course of world peace so powerful and so sure as to make probable at least the effective functioning of the United Nations as an instrumentality of world stability."

Jessup Points to 3 Lessons

Similar confidence was expressed by Ambassador Philip C. Jessup, who was sure the world would profit from the lessons taught by the Korean episode. These lessons, he declared, were three:

"The first is that the peace propaganda of international communism is a tissue of lies and deceit.

"The second is that the unity of the free world is the only answer to aggression.

"And the third is that the United Nations has come into its own; we know now that the world organization is a functioning instrument for collective security.

During most of his 45-minute address Jessup ripped into the Communist propaganda story that South Korea started the aggression, with American prompting, and that the United Nations acted illegally.

"World-wide Communist propaganda has tried to hide its aggression under a flood of lies," Jessup said, and the reports of the United Nations' own commission in Korea had made the facts of the aggression "crystal clear."

Can't Hide 'Mark of Cain'

By the Security Council's vote on June 25, he said, "the Communist invaders have been adjudged as having launched an armed attack, and no amount of Communist propaganda will succeed in hiding the mark of Cain on their foreheads."

As for the alleged illegality of the Council's action, Jessup said the Soviet Union itself had violated Article 28 of the Charter by boycotting U. N. proceedings. And he cited a dozen precedents of Security Council action on past occasions without the concurrence of the Soviet delegate, and without any legal challenge by the Soviet Union.

Jessup promised that after the North Koreans have withdrawn to the thirty-eighth parallel, and after peace and security in the area have been restored, "we shall continue our policy of supporting the United Nations in its efforts to secure a permanent adjustment of the situation in Korea in the interests of the Korean people."

He also said the Korean emergency would not prevent the United States and the United Nations from grappling with long-range problems "affecting the peace and welfare of mankind." One of the most important of these efforts, he said, was the U. N. work of technical assistance allied to the American Point Four program.

"Sudden aggressive armed attacks on peaceful, independent states must be met and rolled back. But the peace and welfare of mankind are always under attack by poverty and disease. Our resources are adequate to cooperate in this perennial struggle at the same time that we are meeting the emergency of the moment."

Canadian Ambassador Speaks

Still another who talked confidently of the outlook was Hume Wrong, the Canadian Ambassador in Washington, speaking on "Canada in the North Atlantic Community." Although the Korean action had shifted interest momentarily to the Far East, the Ambassador said, it proved "that the North Atlantic Treaty neither weakened the security of other countries nor undermined the position of the United Nations."

He recalled that the North Atlantic Treaty had been needed because a universal security system had failed "to meet the urgent dangers of our time."

The speed, range and devastation of modern warfare require collective preparation in advance of war, and makes such preparation the best available preventive of war. "He declared." The price of peace is high—much higher than formerly, especially for countries geographically remote—but we all know better than 10 years ago that peace is worth a high price.

Looking to the future, the Ambassador said the North Atlantic Treaty is certainly not the final nor exclusive organization of the North Atlantic Community. Although it put voluntary limits on the partners' sovereignty.

"One cannot say in the long run whether these methods will suffice," the Ambassador said. "Even if they are evidently insufficient, no one can tell today whether Canada or the United States or other Atlantic democracies will, in time, be able to agree on a permanent merger of part of their sovereignty into a North Atlantic commonwealth, with a federal authority empowered to conduct foreign policy, to provide for defense, and to levy taxes to support the merged activities."

He said the Canadian people already saw the error of past isolationism, but they wanted and expetced the greater democratic powers to consult them before taking decisions on great international issues.

The real strength of the North Atlantic countries, he concluded, was a common tradition "which the Communists scorn and repudiate"—a tradition of the freedom and the dignity of the individual.

"By strengthening these factors within ourselves, and by demonstrating them to the rest of mankind through example more than through precept," the Ambassador said, "the Atlantic nations and like-minded countries can hope to lead the world from its present distracted state into a condition of civilized serenity."

Before the Ambassador talked tonight, Gov. John S. Battle delivered an official greeting from the Commonwealth of Virginia

"Times such as these," he said, "call for clear thinking, thorough understanding and fearless decisions."

He expressed pleasure that the Institute had been revived after a long lapse and said the result of its discussions would be a better-informed and more thoughtful America.

20,000 Draftees Are Ordered At Earliest Possible Moment

strips are under construction in South Korea to enable jet Lockheed F-80 Shooting Stars to step up their support of ground operations.

The long distance the craft have had to come from Japanese bases has given the craft only a few minutes over the target. One F-80 base—somewhere between Taejon and Pusan—is expected to be ready late this week, Maj. Gen. Otto P. Weyland told reporters here.

He just returned from a two-day stay in the Far East to get a first hand picture of what is needed for the aerial phases of the war.

Trained Men Wanted Now

Yesterday's announcement of the draft call showed that the Department of Defense still is aiming at a limited expansion of the armed forces—as far as approved plans are concerned. The 20,000-man draft order, it was said, is required to "meet the new ceiling" approved by the President for the Army.

Both the Air Force and Navy hope to get the extra officers they need by voluntary means—though they are prepared to ask for a call of reservists if necessary. Both services want trained men—not raw recruits. Their need for men—based on the already approved expansion—also is limited in numbers.

Only if there is a substantial mobilization would either want to use the draft. Marine Corps officials say, however, that if their two divisions are to be built to war strength they may need the Selective Service.

The text of the draft announcement:

"A call for 20,000 inductees at the earliest possible date has been transmitted to the Selective Service System by the Department of Defense. The inductees will be assigned to the Department of the Army in accordance with its request under terms of the Selective Service Extension Act of 1950.

"This draft call is required to meet the new ceiling approved by the President. The Army stated that no other recourse is presently available."

Maj. Gen. Lewis B. Hershey, director of Selective Service, held a press conference just before the late afternoon announcement at the Pentagon of the draft call. He had not received word of it, but outlined plans for expanding his organization.

No change is planned in the order of induction or deferment rules, he said. This means, Hershey expained, that the oldest men will be taken first and that men with dependents or who are fathers or are deferred for other reasons will not be called at this time. While there are few 25 or 24-year-old 1A's—who were eligible for the draft during the war—a large bloc of 23-year-olders can be called, he said.

There is no indication as yet as to how many or what types of organized reserve units will be urged to volunteer as a group. President Truman has the power to authorize the Armed Forces to order in such units or individuals but so far has not done so.

All of the services are short of highly trained special forces like radar units and they may be the first brought in one way or other. Perhaps the chief need of the Navy, however, today is "sealift"—transports and cargo vessels—to haul men and supplies across the Pacific.

Therefore, if such craft are hauled out of "mothballs"—as is almost certain—some Navy Reserve line units—may be required to man them.

How short ocean transport is was evidenced by a dispatch from San Francisco yesterday. It said the sailing of the American President liner Gen. W. H. Gordon was suddenly delayed by the Military Sea Transport Service of the Navy to take on 1200 officers and men for Yokohama.

MSTS, it was reported, chartered the space and redirected the ship to sail directly for Japan, by-passing Honolulu. Passengers bound for Hawaii were told to seek other travel means.

The United Press reported from San Diego that the escort carrier Badoeng Strait disembarked reserve midshipmen and began loading fighter planes of the First Marine Air Wing for shipment to the Far East. It also said that tanks and equipment of the First Marine Division were being loaded aboard the transports Pickaway, George Clymer and Henrico and the cargo ship Archerner.

General Weyland told reporters the Korean operations caught the Far Eastern Air Force at a disadvantage, as it was set up as an air defense force, deployed from Northern Japan to the Philippines. Little close support could be furnished the South Korean at the start for this reason, because the fighters were covering our air evacuation and airlift of supplies and because there was no ground-air communications parties only air liaison, he said.

U. N. Council Half Wrecked, Pravda States

Moscow, July 10 (AP).—Pravda today described the United Nations Security Council as "half wrecked."

The Communist Party newspaper, in a dispatch from Lake Success, said the action of the "remnants" of the Security Council in putting forces in Korea under General MacArthur and the U. N. flag was a "shameful farce" played out under instructions from the United States State Department.

The U. N. was being misused, said the dispatch, by "aggressive circles of the United States in order to justify their criminal role as gendarmes in Korea and other nations of Asia."

"Thus there is being formed under the flag of the U. N. a coalition of imperialists and beasts of prey for the bloody suppression of the Korean people," the paper added.

Pravda said the Security Council, "basic organ of the U. N., is factually paralyzed and without legal authority" because United States policies made impossible the participation of the Soviet Union and the Chinese Communist government.

Seeking to give purported American reaction to Korean developments, the dispatch said many Americans feel that their military leaders have gone too far and "hour by hour are dragging the Nation into an open war".

There was nothing here, however, to indicate that the Soviet Union believes another world war inevitable. Since the fighting in Korea began, Soviet commentators have stressed that those seeking peace will prevail.

The dispatch said thousands of Americans, including 500,000 in New York, have signed the Communist-sponsored Stockholm peace petition. It reported, however that some persons circulating the petition were jailed or subjected to other humiliations.

Other dispatches in the Soviet press said volunteers for North Korean forces now totaled 500,000

Union Chiefs Called to Plan Labor Controls

By the United Press

W. Stuart Symington, armed with new power to boss the Nation's war mobilization planning, will meet with labor leaders today to outline prospective manpower controls in event the Korean war turns into World War III, it was disclosed yesterday.

Administration officials emphasized, in the meantime, that the Government has no present intention to clamp price, production, rationing or manpower controls on the economy. They said the labor conference had been planned before the war broke out, and follows similar meetings with management and other groups that would be involved in control machinery.

But the war mobilizers want to polish up their tentative control proposals so they can be shot to the White House and Congress in event a major war develops.

Plan in Effect

Symington, chairman of the National Security Resources Board, got his new power Sunday when President Truman's reorganization plan for the board went into effect. It makes the former Air Secretary undisputed boss of the agency charged with drawing up mobilization plans. However, the board's job is only advisory and its plans must be cleared by Mr. Truman.

Moving swiftly to ready control blueprints in case of need, Symington invited officials of the AFL, CIO, United Mine Workers, railroad brotherhoods and International Association of Machinists to attend an "informal" luncheon today.

Many of labor's big names will be there, including UMW Chief John L. Lewis, AFL President William Green, and G. E. Leighty, president of the Railway Labor Executives Association. CIO President Philip Murray is recovering from an eye operation and cannot make it, but other top CIO officials will attend.

An NSRB spokesman said Symington will "point out some things" the labor leaders "might be thinking about," and will answer their questions. He will probably ask some himself, presumably as to what the Government can count on from labor in event of a major conflict.

No Sign of Rationing

The spokesman said there is no evidence as yet that rationing may have to be put into effect because of military buying for the Korean war.

Any control plans would have to be submitted to Congress. The "Big Four" Democratic House and Senate leaders said controls were not discussed yesterday at their weekly meeting with the President.

Government and oil industry spokesmen said the United States oil industry can meet all military needs in Korea without civilian rationing, but they warned that rationing is certain if a major war breaks out.

Administration war planning is on a day-to-day basis, and a changed situation—such as serious inflation due to "scare" buying—could cause a shift in the attitude toward controls.

Committee Report on Arms Aid Bill Delayed 24 Hours

The House Committee on Foreign Affairs is expected to report out today the Senate-approved bill authorizing $1,222,500,000 for a second year of military aid abroad.

The committee took up the bill yesterday morning and hoped to complete it in an afternoon session. Action on the floor of the House, however, blocked the later meeting.

Once approved by the committee, the bill is scheduled for prompt action by the House.

The Senate, spurred by the Korean situation, passed the authorizing measure 66 to 0. Its Appropriations Committee has already recommended the full amount in a section of the omnibus money bill.

One billion dollars of the total will go to the North Atlantic Pact nations of western Europe. The rest goes to Greece, Turkey, Iran, the Philippines, Korea and "the general area of China," which is to say, southeast Asia.

The amount is the same as that for fiscal year 1950, except for a reduction this year in the total for Greece and Turkey.

Thye Asks Bipartisan Loyalty Program Check

Senator Thye (R., Minn.) yesterday introduced a bill for the creation of a bipartisan commission to investigate the Government's loyalty and security procedures. It would make a full study of the President's Loyalty Program for Federal employes.

U. S. Tanks Smashing At Enemy's Armor of the western front and on the east forced South Koreans back five miles.

Word of the South Korean retreat was contained in a communique issued at 1:45 p. m., Japan Daylight Time (10:45 p. m. Monday EDT).

No decisive action took place since this morning, headquarters said.

The South Korean's withdrawal took place in the Chinchon area, 35 air miles north of Taejon.

MacArthur also announced that North Korean jet fighters appeared for the first time yesterday as allied planes destroyed or damaged 65 Communist tanks in their biggest single day of the war.

A general headquarters communique said, however, this total might include some of the 46 tanks reported knocked out or shot up in previous reports of yesterday's air action.

Monday's air attacks on Communist-held positions and supply lines were described here as the heaviest air effort in Korean operations thus far.

United States warplanes ruled the skies in ceaseless sorties. The artillery of the American gunners drew only "very light" counterfire from the North Korean guns, the spokesman said.

American reinforcements streamed toward the front in an attempt to offset the 20-to-1 or worse odds which United States infantrymen faced early in the struggle.

The Americans were infuriated by a confirmed report that seven of their comrades, captured in earlier fighting, had been found brutally slain by their captors.

The seven were killed by shots through the face. Their hands were bound behind them. The bodies were found when ground was recaptured by counterattack.

The spokesman said the United States tanks in their "first brush" with the enemy had "acquitted themselves very nicely."

Our Tanks Are "Outgunned"

He said without elaboration that the United States tanks were "outgunned." He may have meant that medium United States tanks were meeting heavy Russian-made ones.

The locality was not given in the dispatch. It said simply that the outgunned American tanks met the enemy on the main sector of the western part of the front.

This is the region in which the North Communist invaders pushed to within eight road miles of the Kum River and to within 20 air miles of Taejon to the south. Taejon, south of the Kum, is American headquarters.

The North Korean advance appeared to have slowed before the combined blows of U. S. warplanes, tanks and artillery. After four days of furious fighting, U. S. and South Korean troops regained a little ground at some points.

The North Koreans were pushing three prongs southward despite a withering concentration of United States aerial fire which destroyed or damaged 46 tanks yesterday, by Air Force account.

The First and Third North Korean divisions had advanced several miles south since Monday along the main highways on the western part of the front. This is where United States troops and their South Korean comrades are engaged.

Farthest south was the Third division battling the Americans just north of Chochiwon. Chochiwon is 20 air miles north of Taejon and eight road miles from the Kum river.

Eastward, South Koreans were attacked by the Northerners' First Division near Chongan, which is 32 air miles northeast of Taejon.

Both of these columns appeared to be about 10 miles south of previously reported positions.

The Second North Korean Division was attacking between these two prongs south of Chinchon, which is 35 air miles almost due north of Taejon. South Koreans hold this sector.

The advance continued slowly and bloodily despite concentrated warplane attacks that must have cost the Communist columns heavily in life and equipment.

General MacArthur's communique described one attack yesterday that caught a "sitting duck" column moving bumper to bumper through Chonan, only 16 air miles north of the fighting along the approaches to the Kum River.

A deadly hail of rockets, machinegun bullets and pellied gasoline fire bombs was poured into the trapped column.

General MacArthur's communique early Tuesday said Red troops which had advanced to Chochiwon —their nearest approach to Taejon—"have temporarily lost their momentum." It warned, however, that they were moving up reinforcements for a probably renewed attack.

Whether in high or low gear, the Red columns obviously still were feeling the effects of a terrific pounding Sunday and Monday by United States Air Forces.

One Red armored unit, caught near Chonan in a bumper-to-bumper traffic jam, lost 46 tanks to the American raiders, front line dispatches said.

The Air Force announced the start of around-the-clock strikes, regardless of weather, and claimed that aerial depredations have already slowed or stalled the Red movement.

Tokyo also said the Reds had gained ground on the Umsong-Chungju area. Chungju is 50 miles northeast of Taejon. The Red southward push along the east coast—an action believed aimed at severing South Korean supply lines from the big port of Pusan to the front—was still in progress, Tokyo headquarters said. It was being opposed by the Navy and Air Force.

Tokyo asserted North Korean troop morale was deteriorating because of the air attacks.

The seven American atrocity victims were found along a roadside in a patch of territory recaptured Monday. (Such murder of prisoners is a flagrant violation of international law and conventions of war.)

Lieutenant Gates found the men a few hours after four of them—under his own immediate command—had gone to a front-line area which the Americans later lost.

"They turned a corner (in two jeeps) and ran into two tanks," Gates said. A third jeep, stumbling into the same predicament, turned and made a run for it. The driver was killed, but his companion escaped.

"An observation post saw the two in each of the other jeeps surrender. When I arrived on the spot I found my four men and three mortar men, their hands tied behind them and a bullet fired into each face."

At the front, South Korean Army spokesman Col. Keum Lee said that two enemy divisions were approaching Changhowon north of Umsong, but predicted South Korean troops would hold their positions along the Chungju-Umsong-Chinchon line. The dispatch was timed 9 a. m. Monday and was delayed in transmission.

He said South Koreans had killed 204 North Koreans, captured four machineguns, four antitank guns and 20 rifles Sunday. He also said seven Red tanks got into Ongyang, some seven miles southwest of Chonan and killed 200 South Korean policemen, rightist leaders and civilian officials. The tanks, he said, were still hiding there.

(Headquarters and field dispatches indicated the Reds may be having some tactical difficulties, due in part to terrain. While the main southern spearhead, traveling via the principal road south from Seoul, had almost reached Chochiwon, another division to the east, trying to move south on a more or less parallel route, seemed to be stalled or lagging. The eastern column comprising the North Korean Second Division, was being engaged by South Korean forces at Chinchon, almost 20 air miles northeast of Chochiwon. If this move south by these parallel columns was designed to envelop South Korean forces somewhere around Taejon the eastern spear looks, at this point, dangerously tardy for the Reds.)

MacArthur's communique early Tuesday also mentioned progress of the Reds' east coast column. This force or forces landed around Samchok, just below the thirty-eighth parallel, and moved south along the coast with other groups striking inland.

The strength is vague and present positions none too definite. The Reds seem either to be trying to execute an enveloping movement, using the eastern forces as one of the prongs; or to be trying to cut supply lines from the American feeder port of Pusan; or merely to conduct rear and flank harassing raids and try to whip up guerilla allies.

Troops of Red China Reported in Korea

Headquarters, United States Army Forces in Korea, July 10 (U.P.).—A report which came from two reliable sources, though it could not be confirmed, said today that expatriate Koreans who long served in the Chinese Communist army now were fighting in the North Korean army.

Intelligence reports said that these Communists, who spent nearly all their lives in Manchuria, had been integrated into the North Korean forces to give the latter a nucleus of veteran fighters.

Free Mail Voted for Troops In Korea; GI Rights Bill Asked

Extension of the GI Bill of Rights to soldiers fighting in Korea was urged yesterday by Senator Harry P. Cain (R., Wash.).

He introduced enabling legislation shortly after the Senate passed a bill giving free mailing privileges to American servicemen in Korea.

"The men fighting in Korea are deserving of being protected by every reasonable benefit a grateful homeland can provide," said Cain, a wounded World War II airborne veteran.

Two other vets, Senators Robert C. Hendrickson (R., N. J.) and John W. Bricker (R., Ohio) also sponsored the bill.

"The Korean fighting is but an extension of the life and death struggle against totalitarianism for which this Nation and our Allies suffered and sacrificed in the last war," Cain said.

The free mail bill was approved unanimously by the Senate and sent to the House.

Passed within minutes after it was introduced by Senator Millard E. Tydings (D., Md.), of the Senate Armed Services Committee, the measure was similar to the GI mail rights of United States forces in World War II.

"Men fighting in Korea have no postage stamps in their pockets," Tydings said. "Yet they want to communicate with their friends and loved ones."

peatedly they ran short distances and dived for cover as bullets kicked up ground around them, playing dead five or six times.

They crawled down a valley and were nearly exhausted when they reached a village where a 16-year-old Korean boy, able to speak English, let them stay in his home. The boy's frightened parents asked them to leave about 4 a. m. They moved up to a bridge and at first struck north, thinking they would cross the enemy's rear. But the Red columns were too long and they headed southwest. Once they saw Red soldiers 200 yards away.

The Koreans were able to get rice from friendly villagers along the way. About 4 a. m. Saturday the party reached the front line and slipped under a bridge held by the Reds.

Air Force Begins Day-Night Onslaughts on North Koreans

Tokyo, July 10 (AP).—American warplanes have begun day-and-night onslaughts on the North Korean forces. "Miraculous" reusits were reported from a rigorous attack on congested enemy tank and troop traffic in South Korea Sunday.

Lieut. Gen. George E. Stratemeyer, Far East Air Force commander, said today the attacks were but the first of an around-the-clock schedule made possible by plane reinforcements. "Weather will be no deterrent" to the stepped-up precisin attacks, he promised.

An FEAF communique said approximately 150 American planes hit the jammed traffic moving toward the front south of Chonan, 50 miles south of Seoul. They raked troops and tanks with machinegun fire and firebombs. The foray netted 46 Communist tanks destroyed or damaged, bringing the air arm's claims to 123 tanks destroyed or disabled in two weeks of warfare.

Any target of value to the Northern Reds will be hit in the new tempo of air war, Stratemeyer told a group of correspondents."

"Given a break in the weather," he coinnteud, "an increased FEAF air potential will shortly make itself felt in no unmistakable terms. "We dont intend to bomb cities. But we are going to bomb any target that is or will be of military assistance to the North Korean government."

Already, the air commander said in summarizing the first 15 days of conflict, the combined air, ground and Navy power have "stopped" the northern invader. He had warm praise for his airmen.

"They have performed so superbly, both in daring and efficiency," he said, "I have nothing but praise for them. The results are outstanding, unbelievable and in some cases miraculous."

There were these hints, but no elaboration, of what is ahead:

New airfields are being constructed in South Korea to shorten the distance for air strikes.

More B-29 bombers already are here or arriving and Marine forces are bringing their own air power.

"We will take anything from any source that will be made available," Stratemeyer quoted General MacArthur as saying.

Sky-streaking jet fighter planes (F-80s) have performed "magnificently," the air commander said. They have carried out all missions assigned to them including close support of ground troops. These statements countered reports that the jets were too speedy for close-in battle action.

What has become of the Northern Korean airforce continued somewhat of a mystery. Stratemeyer said the Reds' air force had been given rough treatment and was known to be short of gasoline.

"We haven't found many (North Korean) planes on airfields and as to where they are or have gone we don't know," he commented.

The summary of the first 15 days of action gave these results:

Allied planes have flown 1570 sorties, destroying or damaging 123 Red tanks, 41 planes and a vast amount of other equipment.

American combat losses were listed as 20 warplanes and five transport planes and nine American airmen killed, five wounded and 12 missing.

In the Sunday attack the North Koreans got their first taste of the Napalm fire bombs used in World War II. Napalm is a jelly-like liquid which includes gasoline. Tanks of it dropped from the bellies of planes explode on contact, spraying the flaming liquid in all directions. This attack was hammered home all forenoon and part of Sunday afternoon despite foul weather. Numerous casualties among enemy ground troops were reported.

The success of the operation was attributed to coordinated air and ground control of air operations.

Army-Air Force Enlistments Here Rise 10%

Force authorities said the number trying to enlist was the greatest since World War II.

A Navy spokesman in Los Angeles told the Associated Press: "We were swamped. We had 30 enlistments a week; now we have 30 a day."

The situation was similar in Memphis, Atlanta, Milwaukee, Columbus (Ohio), Pittsburgh, Indianapolis, and Kansas City.

Only Baltimore and New Orleans reported a normal flow of applications.

In Washington, before the Defense Department's call for 20,000 draftees, the explanation for the increase varied.

An Air National Guard sergeant and a sergeant for the Army Reserves office said excitement was the explanation for the increased inquiries in their branches.

"Everybody seems to be excited," said the Reserve sergeant.

"The tension is getting heavier and heavier," said the Air National Guard man.

Marine Sergt. Nick Gledich, public information sergeant for the District Marine recruiting office, thought it was "the draft, plus a little worry over Korea."

A lieutenant in the Army-Air Force station said he couldn't get a satisfactory explanation from the men he talked with—draft or Korea.

The combined center had 125 applicants for enlistment in the Army and Air Force, twice as many as usual, he said.

The day brought 16 applications for the WACS and WAAFS—"a helluva figure, as much as in a week."

In nearby Virginia and Maryland, 12 applied in the Army Air Force office in Alexandria; eight in Frederick, Md., and six in Arlington. No figures were available for comparison, but a Washington recruiting spokesman said the picture was about normal.

The Navy office in Washington reported two new enlistments in the Naval Reserves.

But 88 applied for officers' commissions yesterday compared with a normal 8 to 10 a day. There were 30 volunteers for active duty with the reserves, and 40 applications—compared to three or four a day—for regular Navy enlistments.

No Maximum Quotas

The recruiting offices said they had no maximum quotas. Their offices would remain open beyond the usual closing hours, "just as long as there's another applicant to be processed."

With the flow of applications increased so quickly, the offices could not give any percentages of those who passed examinations compared to those who applied. "Turn-downs"—both locally and nationally—seemed to be running high, according to some estimates.

The Potomac River Naval Command announced, meantime, that it has sent letters to 10,000 Naval Reservists—officers and enlisted men both—informing them that the Navy is looking for "qualified" applicants to go, on active duty. Specialists in certain fields are preferred.

Can Draft 300,000 in 90 Days

be called up in the 23, 22, 21, 20, and 19-year-old age brackets, in descending order.

General Hershey pointed out that most men in the 25 and 24 age groups are veterans of World War II and therefore in Class 4-A. The greatest reservoir of 1-As is in the 23 to 19-year age brackets.

Pool Grows 3300 Daily

In World War II, Hershey said, it took six to eight 1-As to produce a single inductee for the armed forces for one reason or another. This ratio, applied to the present pool of available 1-As, would produce little more than 200,000 men. However, the pool is added to daily by 3300 new 19-year-olds eligible for induction.

The draft chief estimated he is going to need 30 million dollars to expand the Selective Service System as a result of current defense activities. Some 2000 paid clerical help will have to be increased to some 10,000, and volunteer help will have to be expanded from the present 38,000 to around 200,000 persons, Hershey said.

Latest Selective Service classification figures show the following breakdown of American youths in the draft ages of 19 through 25.

1-A, fit and available for service, 1,466,629.

1-C, inducted into service under Selective Service Act of 1948, 17,316; enlisted, 143,000; discharged after serving, 18,000; went into reserves after serving, 22,590.

1-D, deferred because of enlistment in reserve component, 133,000.

2-A, deffered because essential to industrial occupation, 40,990.

2-C, deferred because essential to agricultural occupation, 133,800.

3-A, deferred because of dependents, 742,400.

4-A, deferred because of prior military service, 2,698,000.

4-B, deferred by statute because of Governmental position, 13.

4-C, deferred as aliens, 5200.

4-D, deferred as minister or theological student, 21,500.

4-E, conscientious objectors, 9900.

4-F, physical, mentally, or morally disqualified for service, 536,190.

5-A, men registered under post-war Selective Service who have become ineligible for the draft by virtue of having reached their 26th birthday, 1,636,400.

Some May Now Be Exempt

General Hershey made it clear than some of the men listed as 1A may have made themselves eligible for a deferred classification since the date they were registered. This is a question to be determined for each of the 1As by the local boards, he said.

Meanwhile, at the District draft board office, Deputy Director Frank Norton announced that 249 young men had registered yesterday as a result of the current Selective Service publicity. Many of these had violated the provisions of the law which demand that young men register within five days after attaining the age of 18. Norton said there would be no question of penalties for those tardy registrants. "We'll mark it down to honest forgetfulness," he said.

Norton said he had received a number of queries from persons who had registered in another community and then moved here. These registrants will be called up according to their permanent addresses.

Registrants from other communities living or working here can arrange to take their board exams here if they can show it would mean hardship to travel back to their home communities for the exams, according to Norton.

Socialists to Back Pleven

Paris, July 10 (U.P.)—Premier-designate Rene Pleven was virtually assured today of winning National Assembly approval as prime minister Tuesday as the balance-of-power Socialists announced they would vote for him.

But Pleven still was not sure whether the Socialists would join his government and permit him to form a solid middle-of-the-road coalition to end France's 16-day-old political crisis.

The Socialists, who have overthrown the last five cabinets, told Pleven this afternoon he would have their 99 votes when he goes before the Assembly to ask for confirmation as premier.

Their support, added to that of the 152 Catholic Popular Republicans, the 60-odd Radical Socialists and allied groups and several score independents and moderate rightists, would give the former Defense Minister a comfortable margin over the 311 votes he needs.

But the Socialists still had not made up their minds whether to join Pleven's cabinet. The party's national council discussed the matter but had reached no decision by early evening.

Steeplejack Goes Back After 130-Foot Fall

Mount Forest, Ont., July 10 (U.P.) William Blair, 40, fell from the church steeple he was repairing, bounced off the roof and hit the ground, altogether a 130-foot plunge.

Today, he rubbed his bruises and prepared to go back up and finish the job.

Truman Calls Senate Leaders

an early congressional adjournment unless the Korean conflict takes another turn for the worse.

Senate Majority Leader Scott W. Lucas (Ill.) stressed that legislative plans are still keyed to Korean, but barring unforeseen conditions, "I am still working to the end that we may leave here around July 31. This is my hope and I believe we can do it."

Lucas told newsmen that as far as he knows the President is not considering any drastic news steps in connection with Korea. Later he told the Senate that no "immediate legislation implementing the war effort" was suggested during yesterday's White House talks.

Speaker Rayburn said he thought additional military appropriations "a probability," although the President did not say so at yesterday's conference.

The Speaker, like Lucas, conditioned adjournment plans on Korean developments, but came out flatly against Congress taking a contingent recess, subject to recall by the Vice President and Speaker. He implied anything short of a sine die adjournment would be expressing lack of confidence in the President.

Committed on Form

When adjournment talk bobbed up in Senate debate, Lucas did not commit himself on the form the leave should take. Hinting at the possibility of a limited recess of two or three weeks, he promised Republicans any arrangement worked out will be "satisfactory to both sides."

If the President decides emergency legislation is needed, he said, Congress will clear it with dispatch, laying aside any pending domestic measures in the way.

"Obviously if conditions in Korea gravitate to the point where they are more serious than they are today, or if things continue as they are at the present time, neither the Senator from Illinois nor any other Senator would desire to adjourn Congress," Lucas told colleagues.

In proposing that the President set a "national unity" Government, with Republicans in his Cabinet, Senator Knowland said he acted on his own initiative, without committing other members of his party.

He did not say precisely what Cabinet posts should be assigned to Republicans. Prior to World War II, President Roosevelt named the late Frank Knox Secretary of the Navy and Henry L. Stimson Secretary of War.

Wants Election and Denial

Knowland also called on President Truman to tell the country he will not use his office "to assist the partisan campaign of members of his own political party" in the coming elections.

"Such a policy would be of the highest statesmanship and a major contribution to the continuation of the national unity so desperately needed at this critical hour," Knowland said.

In the same speech, Knowland proposed:

That aircraft carriers and their escort vessels now "in mothballs" be put back in commission at once to offset the shortage of airfields in Korea.

That the President tell the country "the draft will have to be used and a considerable number of reservists called up."

That we permit Generalissimo Chiang Kai-shek's Nationalists troops in Formosa to supplement out forces in Korea.

Knowland said our responsibilities in the Far East should "be shared by the Asiatic and Western members as full partners in this action to strike down lawless aggression."

Tsiang to Seek U. N. China Issue Revival

Lake Success, July 10 (AP).—Nationalist China's chief U. N. delegate today denounced Communist North Korean aggression against South Korea and told the Little Assembly the Korean Communist tactics are similar to "Soviet aggression" against China.

The delegate, T. F. Tsiang, served notice he would ask the Little Assembly to discuss the Chinese issue. It was said off the Assembly floor that he would seek a meeting late in July or early next month. The Little Assembly met without the Russians, who have boycotted it from its establishment in 1948.

As Tsiang spoke, some high diplomats said Communist China lost all chances of gaining United Nations recognition when the Communist North Koreans attacked the South.

Lie Holds to Stand

Earlier, a U. N. spokesman said Secretary-General Trygve Lie has not changed his position on the issue of Chinese representation. Lie favors recognition of the government exercising effective authority over a country. This, in China's case, would mean the Red Chinese regime instead of the Nationalists, since the Communists control the mainland.

The spokesman also said Lie has not abandoned and will not abandon his efforts for peace as outlined in his 10-point memorandum. Lie has been concentrating on restoring peace in Korea, and there had been some indications that the war had shelved his efforts on his program for peace between the East and the West.

The spokesman said that, on the contrary, after peace has been restored in Korea by U. N. action, the role of the U. N. as a universal organization through which mediation and concillaton should be attempted will be more necessary than ever.

Muniz Lauds Truman

Joao Carloz Muniz of Brazil, president of the Little Assembly praised President Truman for making a historical decision in helping the U. N. resist aggression. He said that without the demonstration of aid from the United States the Security Council resolutions against the North Koreans still would have been without enforcement. He said the Korean crisis is a turning point in U. N. history.

The Security Council was expected to remain in recess a week or more while it awaits reports from Gen. Douglas MacArthur, supreme commander of U. N. forces in the Korean war. No time was set for reports.

Second Request

Help Stop War, Britain Asks Soviet

London, July 10 (U.P.).—Britain sent Russia a new request today for her cooperation in stopping the Korean war.

Informed sources said the request was verbal and "was being transmitted" to the Soviet Foreign Office by Sir David Kelly, British Ambassador to Moscow.

This possibly meant that Kelly met Soviet Deputy Foreign Minister Andrei Y. Gromyko for talks for the second time within a week.

The verbal note repeated British hopes that the Soviet Union will use her influence to carry out the United Nations Security Council resolutions on Korea, but made no specific proposal for a settlement, informed quarters said. This request, to be delivered orally, was forwarded to Kelly in Moscow earlier today.

Both Britain and the United States sent similar requests to Russia after the outbreak of hostilities in Korea. Gromyko told Kelly the first British request required no reply since it made no particular proposal. This was regarded in some quarters as a feeler for a specific British formula. Today's verbal note was in response to the Russian reply.

The second British request was drafted after consultations with the United States and informed sources said both governments felt any settlement must be made within the scope of the U. N. resolutions. Gromyko on July 4 declared the U. N. acted illegally and he denounced the Security Council as an "instrument" of the United States.

Meanwhile, the British government made it clear that while it is ready to give all aid in halting the Korean fighting, it was not committed to enforcing the American decision to defend Formosa.

Foreign Undersecretary Ernest Davies told Parliament, "We are supporting United States action in Korea by immediately placing our naval forces in Japanese waters at the disposal of United States authorities."

Asked what help had been promised the United States in the defense of Formosa, Davies replied, "None, Sir."

Davies also told Parliament that:

1. No progress has been made in negotiations for establishment of diplomatic relations between Britain and Communist China, and,

2. While Egypt's refusal to support the U.N. on Korea was a matter of concern to the government, there was no question of Britain halting arms shipments to Egypt.

After Britain notified the Red Peking regime she would like to establish diplomatic relations, the Communist government sent a list of conditions for friendly relations.

On June 21, Davies said, Britain sent a noncommittal reply and the position has not changed since then. One Conservative member called the procedure "undignified."

Refugees Plan West German Organization

Kiel, Germany, July 10 (AP).—The discontented German Refugee Party in Schleswig-Holstein, which captured nearly a fourth of the votes in Sunday's state parliamentary election, will use its newfound strength to organize as a major political movement in West Germany.

Waldemar Kraft, chairman of the party, declared today one of the first moves will be to put the party on a West German federal republic level. The Refugees then will demand dissolution of the current federal parliament and call for new elections in which their party would take an active part.

About one million refugees from East Germany and other eastern territories are crowded in Schleswig-Holstein, and eight million to nine million are in other states of Western Germany.

Crowd Backs Milk Rules at Hearing

grabbed chairs the minute they were vacated.

Attendants checked more than 700 attempting to get in the 200-seat District conference room. They had evidently been recruited from the membership of the Maryland-Virginia Milk Producers Association. They wildly applauded every witness who testified in line with what the producers want. They cheered every sally by the association's lawyer, William E. Leahy. They booed and jeered every witness who urged changes in the present inspection laws. Late in the afternoon they even shouted "Throw him out," "Tell him to sit down," and similar remarks at Attorneys John Hillyard and Robert E. Lynch of the opposition.

Hearing Continues Today

They asked in the afternoon that the meetings be halted early—"at least by 4:30," as one said, "so we can get home to our milking." The Commissioners consented. The hearing was adjourned at 4:30 p. m. until today at 10 a. m., in the Commerce Auditorium.

Today consumers groups will be heard, as well as witnesses for the Wakefield and Embassy Dairies and other groups seeking to liberalize the local rules.

Even at the afternoon session in the artificially cooled auditorium the embattled lawyers and their clients got so overheated they shed their coats and, in some cases, neckties. Fans were turned on to aid the air-conditioning. Attendants rushed cold water to the Commissioners, the lawyers and witnesses, who were constantly thirsty from the continual harping upon cold milk.

In spite of the angry bickering between lawyers, and the cries of support or criticism from the crowd, virtually no new evidence was introduced that hadn't been divulged in the month-long bombardment in newspaper advertising columns that preceded it.

One witness, an official of the milk producers group, almost admitted that an increase in the retail price of milk for Washington had been "unofficially" discussed. He dodged, however, by stating it had not been "officially discussed at the board meeting."

Dr. Daniel L. Seckinger, District Health Officer, started off the hearings with a statement of the proposed changes. He reviewed the history of milk inspections for the last 50 years. He told of the action by the District Commissioners in 1942 in permitting importation of milk from areas beyond the local milk shed to meet increased wartime demand. He pointed out, however, that yesterday's hearing had to do only with changes in inspection regulations. The two proposed changes that caused the most heat was (1) to permit sterilization of dairy farm utensils with chemicals as well as by steam, and (2) the use of a "loafing barn" for the cows before and after milking. Present regulations provide that each cow be kept in a stanchion while in the barn.

Following Seckinger came Representative A. L. Miller (R., Neb.), a Nebraska doctor. Miller is the author of a bill to repeal what he called the "horse and buggy" laws governing milk in the District. Hearings on this measure will start before the House District Committee Wednesday. Two other Congressmen, Representative Glenn Beall (R., Md.) and Representative Howard W. Smith (D., Va.), who oppose both the Miller bill and the Seckinger changes, were present, but did not speak.

Among others who testified were Chester Bletch of the milk Producers Association, and A. W. Fuchs, of the Public Health Service.

Miller got rough with the Maryland-Virginia Milk Producers Association. In turn the audience, and the association's attorney, William E. Leahy, got rough with Miller at times.

"The association has been running some interesting ads in our local newspapers," Miller shouted. "It would seem from their crying baby ads, that the children of the District are insisting on using milk under the steam sterilization code. This organization ought to have a little heart, because just over the line in Virginia and Maryland, the law permits these same children to have milk under the United States Public Health Service code without steam sterilization."

Boos Greet Comment

After the boos that greeted this comment died down, Miller proceeded with: "There seems to be little question but that the present milk law and the regulations attached thereto sets up a milk monopoly and trade barrier for the acceptance of milk in the District of Columbia.

"It seems to me that the system of regulations for scoring the barns, the dairies and processing of milk is being used by the monopoly as an economic weapon under which complete control is placed over the producers of milk in this milkshed."

Miller didn't have to wait long before Leahy opened fire on him. As soon as he finished Leahy took over, with a series of expert witnesses from the dairy departments of various agricultural colleges.

His first was Dr. Robert F. Holland of Cornell University. After asking Holland about how hospitals use steam to sterilize their equipment, he suddenly asked Holland if he had listened to Miller.

"Isn't he the Miler who has introduced a bill in Congress providing for filled milk?" Leahy shouted. The witness answered yes.

At Leahy's request Holland then described "filled milk." He explained it is an imitation milk, much as margarine is like butter, and made of ingredients similar to those in margarine. The butter fat is removed from the milk and cheaper fats, such as soybean oil, cottonseed, cocoanut or other vegetable fats substituted. It has been virtually barred from this country since 1888—about the time the original anti-margarine excise laws which were repealed on July 1 were first adopted.

Miller listened to the Leahy-Holland exchange, and the hoots from the crowd, from a position on the rostrum above the Commissioners' table. From his smiles he seemed to enjoy it.

Educators Testify

Following Holland came J. M. Jensen, assistant professor of Michigan State College; James Howard Brown, professor emeritus of Johns Hopkins; Ira A. Gould of Ohio State; James D. Drew, retired, of the University of Tennessee, and Dr. Gordon M. Cairns, professor of husbandry of the University of Maryland.

A battery of lawyers who wish to change the District regulations, especially to permit chemical sterilization of equipment, tried during each witness' appearance to do a little cross-examing. But Chairman J. Russell Young halted most such attempts.

However, Attorney Robert E. Lynch for the Embassy Dairy, G. E. Taylor of the University Park Citizens Association, and John Hillyard for Wakefield Dairy, several times tripped up Leahy's expert witnesses. Particularly, they made a bad time for Cairns, who had testified that steam sterilization was far better than chemicals. Chemicals, he said, were unreliable.

To Lynch, however, he admitted that at the University of Maryland Dairy barns chemical sterilization is used. It has been in use there five years under his direction, he admitted. "But I'm going to change to steam this fall," he promised, red-faced.

The other experts also admitted that although they testified that steam was far more reliable than chemical sterilization, the States that they work for permit chemicals.

The same sort of an admission was wrung from J. Homer Remsberg, president of the Maryland-Virginia association. After attempting to avoid answering, Remsberg admitted that the association sells milk in Virginia and Maryland that comes from farms that use chemicals instead of steam.

Sold to Walter Reed

This amounts to 6000 to 7000 gallons of milk a day, he said. Much of it is sold to Harvey's Dairy, which, he said, furnishes milk to Walter Reed Hospital and other Government installations. He also admitted that his group had not sought to have either Virginia or Maryland change their inspection laws. But, he said, they are "not taking on any more shippers who don't meet Washington requirements."

Remsberg continually turned to the Commissioners to inquire "Do I have to answer that question?" when under fire from Lynch.

He used this when Lynch demanded to know if the association had discussed an increase in the retail price of milk in Washington.

"Officially, no," he answered.

"Did you discuss it officially or unofficially," Attorney Taylor asked.

After a few moments of study, Remsberg replied: "I don't know what you mean by unofficially. It was not discussed at the board meeting."

At this point Hillyard broke in to ask Remsberg: "How many thousand dollars worth of steam equipment do you have in storage to sell to your members?"

Leahy Interrupts

"Do you want to buy some to sell to your people," interrupted Leahy, before Remsberg could reply. The audience greeted Leahy's remark with cheers. Then Leahy continued: "Nobody here knows, but we will sell it at cost."

"The answer is you have $25,000 to $50,000 worth of equipment on which your association will take a loss if the inspection rules are changed," Hillyard shot back.

The most enthusiastic applause was given to Coleman C. Gore, a Loudon County farmer, who read a long statement to the board. He declared that recent ads stating that the Washington milk price was higher than in most cities were "misleading." Instead, he said, it was lower than the average of 56 cities.

He said the proposed changes were the result of "the tireless efforts" of a "lone wolf among Washington distributors." [Gore later declined to identify to reporters the "lone wolf."]

"We finally got tired of trying to appease this self-appointed stalwart," he shouted, while the crowd cheered.

One fact stood out plainly ahead of all others in the hearing. All witnesses and both sides, admitted that Washington has the best milk of any large city except San Francisco. The producers' association declared that position was largely due to steam sterilization. The other side said it would be the case whether steam or chemicals were used to clean the pots and pans.

Soap Rationing to End In Britain on Sept. 10

London, July 10 (AP).—Food Minister Maurice Webb announced today soap rationing in Britain will end September 10.

Rationing began on February 9, 1942, because of the wartime shortage of fats and oils. The ration now is 24 ounces per person each eight weeks.

D.C. Man Faces Goat Dilemma

in Congress yesterday by Rep. John L. McMillan (D., S. C.). He is chairman of the House District Committee.

His bill would authorize the District Commissioners to regulate the keeping and the running at large of goats in Washington.

Now about the dilemma.

Holmes said he got the goats to keep down the weeds.

McMillan's committee has pigeonholed a bill to let the commissioners keep down the weeds.

Now they're after Holmes' goats. He would lose his goats and acquire the dilemma of removing the weeds.

A figure in the goat complaint is reported to be Albert S. Goss, master of the National Grange. Holmes identified Goss as a leading complainant against the goat herd. Goss would not comment on this.

Although he got the goats to keep down the weeds, Holmes said, the goats turned out to be top-notch milk producers.

Holmes is in the insurance business. He and his wife have owned the goat herd since 1947.

Two months ago, two of the goats created a neighborhood furor when they got loose and invaded gardens in the rear of the 2800 block of McKinley pl. nw. One irate neighbor then protested that the goats got loose periodically and ate bark from trees, plus flowers, fruit and vegetables. Police caught the animals and returned them to their farm.

War Of The Mind

We are glad to note the report that the State Department is about to accept the challenge of Communist propaganda and ask for 100 million dollars to conduct its foreign information and education program. It is about time. The value of the information program is one aspect of foreign policy upon which there has come to be general agreement. If the Administration had not been overly timid in asking for the funds necessary to do an all-out job, there might have been less quibbling over pennies in Congress.

It will be necessary, of course, to expand the program constructively and not indiscriminately. Propaganda is a job that requires skill, not mere verbiage. Nevertheless, there are many outlets which have not been fully utilized. For example, radio programs to some areas are pitifully inadequate; they could be greatly improved by more transmitters and continuous broadcasts. More use might be made of existing national facilities in some countries. Just as important is expansion of the libraries which have become small outposts of America, along with more films and more personal contacts. The export of American talent is in itself a medium of propaganda. There is need to try new and unorthodox methods. Nor are Iron Curtain countries the only important focal points. It is imperative to get the truth across to friends in the free world, especially to countries such as India and Indonesia and in the Middle East. Latin America, too, has been largely neglected in what Senator McMahon recently termed the "whisper of America."

More than a national program is involved. A coordinated international propaganda effort, as we remarked the other day, is one of the measures on which the free world can get together in furtherance of what President Gonzalez Videla of Chile described as a "democratic international." The free world has joined in a common effort against the Communist aggression in Korea. But it would be a mistake to think that it will remain united automatically in the face of the Communist distortions for 24 hours a day. Neutrality is the aim of the Kremlin's propagandists, and they seek to achieve it by implanting the little doubts which pave the way for the big lies. The poisoning of men's minds, of course, is one of the most effective methods of warfare.

It has been observed that actions speak louder than words, and this may be true as respects the short-sighted cut in Point IV funds by the Senate Appropriations Committee. But it is also true that the best-intentioned actions can be hidden or misconstrued unless people are constantly informed about them; indeed, there is a big job just in counteracting the ingrained misconceptions about this country. But above all, the information program must serve as the medium for explaining those decisions on policy and principle which are so subject to Communist distortion. In other words, the "truth offensive" is the best tool for making American—and free world—purposes perpetually and unmistakably clear.

Nation And State

None of the "better government" bills drafted to carry out recommendations of the Hoover Commission has more far-reaching significance than Senator Humphrey's proposal to set up a national commission on intergovernmental relations. This measure came out of the Senate Committee on Expenditures recently and is awaiting action on the floor. It is cosponsored by 41 Senators. There should be no opposition to it, for its purpose is to set in motion a long-range study of that basic but controversial subject of the relationship between the States and the Federal Government.

The study would be made by a temporary bipartisan commission of seven members selected by the President on the basis of their knowledge and experience in the sphere of intergovernmental relations. Its scope would be broad enough to cover any problem concerning the distribution of functions and powers among the Federal, State and local governments. But let no one suppose that it would be kept in the realm of political theory. It would deal with such practical and urgent questions as those arising out of grants in aid, intergovernmental tax immunities and the competition of different governments for taxes from the same sources. It would explore the possibility of different governments sharing the receipts from certain taxes now commonly used.

In the background is the question of how far the Federal Government should go in absorbing the powers of the States and supplying them with revenue. We do not suppose that any commission can satisfactorily answer that question. The people will determine the division of power between national and local governments in accord with what they believe to be their current interest from decade to decade. But a well chosen intergovernmental commission can bring to public attention the trends of recent years and point out the advantages and dangers of those trends. To our way of thinking, the issue is not whether the national power should be enhanced at the expense of the States or whether the States should reclaim many of the functions they have lost, but how governments can best work together on the national and local levels to advance the general welfare. Accommodation will doubtless be the watchword of the commission if it is created, and that will mean accommodation of government to present-day requirements—not the reversion to any outmoded notion as to what Federal-State relations ought to be.

Secretary General

The secretary generalship of the United Nations is not the easiest job in the world in these days of international disunity. Just a short time ago, Mr. Trygve Lie was denounced on the floor of the United States Senate as a minion of Moscow because he attempted to find some ground for rapprochement between the East and the West. And with the echoes of that denunciation still ringing in his ears, he now hears himself excoriated as a Wall Street stooge, an abettor of aggression and worse by the masters of invective who serve the Kremlin. It would appear that the detractors on either side were equally mistaken and that Mr. Lie in both instances was faithfully fulfilling his difficult role as a man above country and beyond partisanship.

In an address at San Francisco a few days ago, the assistant secretary general of the United Nations, Byron Price—the ranking official of American nationality on the secretariat—reminded his audience of the provisions of the U. N. Charter which say that "the secretary general and his assistant shall neither seek nor receive instructions from any government." Mr. Price continued: "And they contain a solemn pledge by every ratifying government that it will not seek to influence the international staff in the performance of its duties." Patently, the business of the United Nations could not be carried on if these rules were not observed.

What Mr. Lie has been loyal to in the Korean crisis is the dignity and authority of the great international body which he serves. And this, of course, is what has won him Russian enmity. But the paramount and indisputable fact in Korea is that the United Nations was challenged there—a fact that overrides the merits of the controversy and the interests of all the nations that are parties to it. As secretary general, Mr. Lie responded to the challenge with a decisiveness and vigor that can leave no room for doubt that the United Nations remains a vital force in world affairs. Korea, as Mr. Price put it, "presented to the United Nations its most severe test in five years of existence." And he continued with this observation:

> Had the United States proposal for sanctions against Northern Korea failed of adoption, or had it never been presented, then the United Nations might well have become overnight as helpless as many of its critics supposed it to be—prior to Sunday, June 25, 1950. Instead it has demonstrated a possibility of strength for good far greater than history has ever known. It is, indeed, that very possibility of strength envisaged at San Francisco, even though details of its accomplishment are not in all respects the same.

The propagandists in Moscow will no doubt continue to assert that the United Nations is merely serving American interests. But the plain truth is that in this situation America, and a goodly company of other nations as well, is serving as an instrument of the United Nations. The hope of the world for an ordered existence under law is now under trial. Mr. Lie has seen this transcendent issue and has acted on it without equivocation. He is entitled to our acclaim not as Americans but as citizens of the world.

Obsolete Timetable

The defeat of several Senators in primary elections is said to have stimulated a new drive for adjournment of Congress. Hard-pressed legislators must, of course, have a breathing spell and an opportunity to repair their political fences. If the aggressors in Korea are still on the rampage, however, we can scarcely imagine Congress quitting the Capital until next January. In time of war or other great emergency the necessity of congressional operations on a year-round basis is generally recognized.

In an interesting article in the American Magazine Representative Norblad of Oregon has raised the issue of giving Congress a year-round schedule in peacetime. No one is likely to challenge his conclusion that the preadjournment rush is an unmitigated evil. Every year Congress comes squarely up against the fact that it cannot pass, during the time allotted for that purpose, all the legislation that the national interest demands. In the frantic rush to meet an arbitrary deadline, Congress enacts laws that few of its members have read, passes appropriations in the most reckless manner, becomes especially susceptible to lobbyist pressures and back-scratching and yields readily to legislative "gags." It is incredibly shortsighted to impose such handicaps on the law-making process for want of reasonable adjustment of the congressional time schedule.

Congressmen ought to recognize these days that they have full-time legislative jobs. They are paid on that basis. They must cope with an increasing burden of work. Representative Norblad points out that committee reports on which Congress must act have increased from 150 in the eighteenth century to 5000. Nominations before the Senate have risen a hundredfold. Since 1900, telephone calls to congressional offices appear to have been multiplied by 60 and the mail of the average Congressman has increased from 15 to 100 letters a day. Congress cannot hope to keep up with its task on a part-time schedule.

Of course, it is necessary for Congressmen to spend time with their constituents. Legislators who remain in Washington the year round are soon retired to private life. The representative principle requires periodic return to the grassroots. But it does not require adjournment from July to January, as the present timetable provides. In recent years Congress has never finished its work in July. We have previously suggested, as Mr. Norblad now does, that in peacetime it would be far more sensible for Congress to leave Washington during the hottest months. It could resume its session in early fall (in nonelection years), take a Christmas vacation and then continue its work through the remainder of the winter and spring. The time for campaigning could also be sharply reduced. Under such a schedule, we suspect that the average Congressman would have a much heartier reception from his constituents than he has after the "midsummer madness" that now precedes an adjournment.

Avoid A Stampede

It would be a mistake to connect the expanded planning powers which W. Stuart Symington has been granted as chairman of the National Security Resources Board with the police action in Korea. Mr. Symington's job is assuredly one of the most important in the Administration, but the new responsibilities he has assumed under Reorganization Plan 25 were proposed long before the Korean invasion broke. They were the result of the doldrums in which the NSRB had languished during its period of government by the Cabinet. Mr. Symington now will have personal responsibility for seeing that the mobilization plan is up to date and ready for instant implementation by Congress. This will include responsibility for drafting proposed manpower legislation, industrial controls, priorities and the like as well as responsibility for advising on current policies and supervising civil defense preparations.

It does not follow from this, however, that general mobilization is contemplated. Some persons have seen in Mr. Symington's scheduled meeting with labor leaders today, for example, an indication that manpower controls are on the way. The fact is that this is but one of a number of meetings Mr. Symington has held with groups such as the National Association of Manufacturers and the Committee for Economic Development. The views of such groups are important in sound mobilization planning; but today's meeting would have been held irrespective of the Korean crisis.

Americans are anxious to do everything necessary to support the Korean effort. But enthusiasm must be tempered with judgment and restraint. It is essential to avoid riding off in all directions at once. To call for general mobilization now would be to do just that. Some degree of mobilization may become necessary, of course, to support the Korean action if it is protracted or if eruptions break out in other hot spots. The labor market is tight in certain areas; it also may be essential to divert some production for munitions manufacture. But if and when such steps are necessary a great deal can be accomplished on a limited or voluntary basis short of all-out mobilization. If there is a danger in complacency, there also is a danger that precipitate mobilization would tie up the country and achieve one of the Russians' purposes. So long as it appears that a general war can be averted through the prompt police action in Korea, we must act accordingly.

Puerto Rican Progress

The American example of responsible stewardship toward dependent territories was carried forward in noteworthy fashion recently when President Truman signed a bill authorizing Puerto Rico to write its own constitution. The island has moved with rapid strides in recent years toward complete self-government. It was given the right in 1947 to elect its own governor, choosing for that office Luis Munoz Marin who has led his people steadily toward economic as well as political emancipation. Now the members of its supreme court, the last remaining officials chosen by Washington, will be locally elected. And the people of Puerto Rico will decide by referendum whether they wish to adopt a constitution of their own in conformity with the stipulation of Congress that it shall guarantee "a republican form of government" and include a bill of rights.

Puerto Rico has been governed since 1917 under an Organic Act adopted by Congress. The projected constitution will make little or no change in the character of the island's government. But it will give Puerto Ricans a measure and symbol of independence which they desired and are entitled to as associates of the United States. The step constitutes, as Secretary of State Acheson observed, "proof of our Government's democratic practice of its democratic faith." A more effective riposte to Soviet yelpings about "American imperialism" could scarcely be presented to the world. And no doubt it will strengthen the ties that bind Puerto Rico in free devotion to the United States.

Crane bled to death in a room
Without a window;
Joseph died in Spain.
I cannot sing a song about their dying.

Here it is harvest-time, the fields are golden,
The circle of the sun is filled again—
There are no words to tell pain and dying.

I only sing that all things have their sorrow—
Silver on silver fall the scythes; the hills
Are full to the sky with sound of falling grain.

Percentage Of Freedom

A United Press dispatch which you published July 5 under the heading "Status of Freedom in World Outlined" contained a table which purported to show "the approximate ranking of human freedoms in various countries." A fascinating document. One notes from it, for example, that Paraguay (to chose what I hope is a noncontrpversial country about which no one has any better statistics than the UP) has 60 percent freedom of speech and press.

Just what does this mean? Sixty percent of the people say what they please while 40 percent keep mum for fear of reprisal? Or everybody can say 60 percent of what he thinks? Or 6 out of every 10 reporters consulted thought Paraguay had free speech and the other four thought it didn't? I'd like to know. It might make a difference.

Or take social equality. Paraguay has 60 percent of that commodity as well. Sixty percent of the people are social equals and the others are what? Better? Worse? Or just not homogeneous?

Paraguay comes out an even 100 on religious freedom (a figure I can understand) so let's skip over to Colombia. It rates 80 percent. Everyone can go to church 8 Sundays out of 10? Or can go to 8 churches out of 10? Or is it that 80 percent of the population belongs to one religion and so had only 20 percent worth of dissidents to persecute? Or persecutes them only 20 percent of the time?

Could you offer some percentage of explanation?

Tanks In Korea

May I say a few words in favor of the heavy tank carrying a long-range cannon besides lighter artillery as a defensive and offensive weapon? Reverting to the Second World War, Col. Charles de Gaulle had been advocating an offensive or defensive army of some 150,000 technicians, with bombers and tanks, instead of the Maginot Line, taking a leaf out of the militarist German book; besides, he foretold that the German blitzkrieg would strike just east of the Maginot Line. When it did break through as he had foretold, the French brass (who disliked him) hastened to promote him to a generalship.

For weeks and months we have known that the Russians had planes and tanks galore, for one or more aggressions they were planning, no doubt. They were putting to use the blitzkrieg lesson of World War II. When satellite North Korea struck, the writer read all he could find and listened to all radio commentators, for news of the tanks we should have been transporting to South Korea, but it seemed that our people had failed to learn the blitz lesson, for only lately are tanks mentioned at all.

Milk Monopoly

The milk consumers of Virginia, as well as the residents of the District, should support the independent milk dairies of Washington in their efforts to limit the greedy grasp of the Maryland-Virginia Milk producers Association.

Not only does this group enjoy an 85 percent monopoly in the Washington area, but it also discriminates against the large families in nearby Virginia.

By means of its "behind the throne" control of the Virginia Milk Commission, the Maryland-Virginia Milk Producers Association prohibits the special discount which the Washington dairies are willing to extend to their large-family customers in nearby Virginia.

In the District, any customer who takes at least six quarts of milk daily gets an added reduction in the price. But in Virginia, only nursery schools and registered boarding-houses may enjoy this privilege.

As the parents of eight children, and so, purchasers of large quantities of milk, my husband and I have petitioned the Virginia Milk Commission for the right to the lower milk-prices which the Washington dairies are willing to offer us. Our efforts thus far have been fruitless—as investigation has shown us that, so insatiable in its greed is the Maryland-Virginia Milk Producers Association that it chooses to ignore that basic American business principle of the-larger-the-quantity-purchased, the-cheaper-the-price-per-unit.

Roman Holiday

Reading the post-holiday records of July 4 fatalities, one is reminded of that famous statue, "The Dying Gladiator," and the last line of its poetic inscription, "Butchered to make a Roman holiday."

Just so truly as history repeats itself so also does it alter values. In retrospect, therefore, we can more charitably judge the emperors of the decadence who only expended a score or so barbarian gladiators on a given Roman holiday.

But the United States, in its dedication to quantity production, makes these old Roman holidays ridiculous. On our highways we butcher, without any redeeming quality of courage, several hundred of motor gladiators to celebrate our holidays. Estimated on an annual basis of close to 40,000 over the last 12 years, our highway fatalities far exceed those incurred in all our wars, to say nothing of the hundreds of thousands of casualties outnumbering deaths, on the basis of war or peace, by three or four to one.

On the other hand we don't have to import our barbarians. We manufacture them in quantities corresponding to their instruments of destruction. "Allah Akbar!" exclaims some Asiatic radio listener. "And they call this civilization!"

Peace Enforcement In Korea

The measures in the following resolution are of proved success in national or international peace enforcement if and when used. By their use, the Korean aggression can be made one of the world's greatest opportunities. All these desired results can come by simply carrying out positive declarations already made by both President Truman and Marshal Stalin.

"Resolution

"The Congress (or United Nations members) note the following:

"The Soviet Union proposals in the League of Nations in 1928, repeated in 1932, for immediate, 'complete and general disarmament,' disarmament to be effected simultaneously in equal percentages of all weapons of all states except for internal police by a commission of representatives of all states, acting by simple majority vote, with complete powers of inspection of all private citizens, officials and the government itself.

"Marshal Stalin's speech as reported in the Soviet Information Bulletin of November 4, 1944, on postwar conditions and to prevent fresh aggression by Germany: 'There is only one means to this end, in addition to the complete disarmament of the aggressive nations; that is to establish a special organization to put the necessary minimum of armed forces required for the averting of aggression at the disposal of the directing body of this organization and to obligate this organization to employ these armed forces without delay if it becomes necessary to avert or stop aggression and punish the culprits.'

"President Truman's declaration for 'a sufficient police force for the United Nations to maintain the peace of the world' and then 'world disarmament.'

"Therefore Congress (or United Nations members) indorse an agreement with these provisions:

"1. Two bodies are to be formed concurrently, one a United Nations Peace Authority to control a Korean police force, the other a court to decide disputes under the agreement. Each body is to have an agreed number of members.

"Each government in the Security Council separately lists nominees for each of the two bodies from all cooperating nations. Each government then strikes from all the lists names it disapproves. The ones that remain become the members of the bodies.

"In each dispute, each side chooses more than half the members of the court which is to decide it, and those thus chosen by both sides try the case. Thus in a court of 21 if each side chose 14, or 28 in all, the seven or more thus chosen by both sides would try the case.

"2. The Peace Authority would have everything necessary to uphold peace and avert new aggression. It would select specially capable, faithful members for the agreed police, pay and control them. It would act by simple majority vote.

"3. The authority would then effect and maintain simultaneous national disarmament pro rata of all weapons down to internal police and police arms of both Korean states, with unlimited powers of inspection.

"4. The authority's forces would contain natives of each state, and would enlist the cooperation of all local forces to protect all citizens against acts leading to war or aggression.

"5. Violations of the agreement would be made national, local and international crimes in both Korean states. Punishment would be against only guilty individuals, and by local or national authorities or the United Nations Peace Authority at its discretion.

"Until an effective agreement is made and executed to carry out the foregoing provisions, the Congress (or United Nations members) indorses immediate proposals in the United Nations by all states, that so approve, for an agreement for Marshal Stalin's declaration for a 'world organization having at its command everything necessary to uphold peace and avert new aggression' and President Truman's 'overwhelming force against armed aggression' and tribunal for 'all nations to adjust their differences peacefully.'"

GOP Fat Cat Contributions

By Marquis Childs

Morse's Tale Of Woe

REPUBLICAN Senators up for reelection this fall met the other day to discuss the all-important question of money and how to raise it. Intended as a pep meeting, it turned out somewhat differently than had been expected.

Present besides the Senators were National Chairman Guy George Gabrielson, and Victor A. Johnston, director of the GOP Senate Campaign Committee. Presiding was Senator Owen Brewster of Maine, chairman of the Senate Campaign Committee.

Brewster spoke in a somewhat solemn vein about the difficulty of raising campaign funds. It would not be easy, he warned, to find sufficient money to help out in each State where there is a Senate contest. Consequently the money would have to be concentrated for the most part in crucial States.

Each Senator was called upon in turn for his suggestions. When it came around to Senator Wayne Morse of Oregon, he began with a good-natured grin to talk about his primary fight.

In that contest the almost unknown challenger, Dave Hoover, a dairy farmer, received contributions of $51,473, and reported expenditures of $3,887 in excess of that amount. A lot of this money came in from wealthy Republicans in the East anxious to defeat Morse because of his liberal record.

"It so happens, gentlemen," said Morse, "that I was forced to run a deficit in my campaign. My opponent was spending a great deal of money that was sent in to him by prominent Republicans from outside the State."

MORSE offered to furnish Gabrielson with a list of some of the largest of these contributions. They include the following:

Frederick C. Crawford, of Cleveland, former president of the National Association of Manufacturers—$1,000.

Ernest T. Weir, of Pittsburgh, Pa., chairman of the board of the National Steel Corp.—$1,000.

Charles E. Merrill of New York, head of the brokerage firm of Merrill, Lynch, Pierce, Fenner & Beane—$1,000.

George W. Merck of Rahway, N. J., chairman of the board of the pharmaceutical house of Merck & Co.—$1,000.

F. Peavy Heffelfinger of Minneapolis, Minn., prominent in various grain elevator companies.—$200.

"Now I don't know whether you are acquainted with any of the contributors or not," Morse continued, his voice underscored with irony, "but if you are, I wish you would give them a message for me. Tell them I have a deficit and I would appreciate it if they would help me make it up.

"But if they don't happen to feel like doing that, then I have a modest request to make. I wonder if you would ask them not to send any money in to my Democratic opposition in the fall campaign."

MORSE knew full well, of course, that most of the big out-of-State contributors are among the fat cats who have forked out the money through all the lean years since 1932 to keep the national committee going. He was also aware that it is these same fat cats who have, in return for their generosity, insisted that the party officially shun anything like "me tooism" or the welfare measures sponsored by the Democrats.

The Senator went on to say—and this was a pleasant surprise to his more conservative colleagues—that the issue he intended to emphasize in Oregon in the fall was the failure of the Democrats to keep the peace, and provide proper defenses for the West. As this is the line the conservatives want to hammer home to the voters, it appears there will be more unanimity than might have been expected in spite of differences over money.

Gabrielson replied courteously to Morse. He said that if the Senator would furnish the list of contributors, he would try to get in touch with them and ask them to refrain from any aid and comfort they might contemplate furnishing to the enemy.

The evidence of big spending by business and conservative interests continues to grow. In the recent Oklahoma primary the utilities and other groups are reported to have spent well over a half million dollars in an unsuccessful effort to reelect Senator Elmer Thomas. Representative Mike Monroney ran nearly 15,000 votes ahead of Thomas, but must meet Thomas again in a runoff on July 25.

A stimulus to political spending by big business was provided by accounts of the political activity of the big trade unions. There were published reports of huge union campaign chests. But it is an ironic fact that the unions have thus far in this campaign year had a tough time scraping up even small amounts of money. So the much heralded political drive by the unions may prove to be something less than an asset.

Today and Tomorrow

By Walter Lippmann

To Localize The Fighting

ON THE critical question, whether the fighting can be localized in Korea, the USSR has the final say.

Lippmann

If Stalin decides not to spread the conflict it will not spread. MacArthur will certainly not attack Soviet or Chinese territory, and, unless President Truman's orders are disobeyed, Chiang Kai-shek will not be permitted to intervene on the Asiatic mainland. On the other hand, if Stalin has decided to expand the conflict, he can do that, and we cannot prevent him. We can only react and resist.

BUT THOUGH the final decision and the ultimate and awful responsibility are his, not ours, the stakes for which we are playing are nevertheless very high indeed: to make it unnecessary and not profitable for the Russians and the Chinese to enlarge the theater of war; to do everything we can, if they do enlarge the war, to have convinced the rest of Asia—the Indians, the Pakistanis, the Japanese, the Indonesians, the Filipinos and the many other peoples—that the Communist armies and not ours are the aggressors, that our men and not theirs are the liberators.

The uncommitted nations of Asia hold the balance of power. If it were certain that they would remain firmly opposed to an extension of the war, the chances of its being extended would be greatly diminished. But if, on the other hand, they came to distrust our purooses, and were to turn away from us and against us, our prospects in Asia would be very poor indeed.

IN CONSIDERING our diplomatic policy we have to realize that although the President announced four decisions—the Korean, the Formosan, the Indo-Chinese and the Filipino—only one of his decisions, namely the Korean decision—has United Nations support. There will, however, be no international difficulty over the Philippines with whom our relations are settled by treaty. But it is no secret that our intervention in Indo-China has won us no friends in India or in any of the other uncommitted nations of Asia, and that our association with Bao Dai, as well as with Chiang, could have cost us the approval of Nehru had the North Korean aggression not been such a naked and obvious violation of the Charter.

But the burning question is over China and Formosa. Even the Times of London calls the President's decision "a debatable point." The way this question is handled may decide whether the Korean war is to be localized. The way it is handled will almost surely decide whether we hold and confirm the support of uncommitted Asia.

THE PRESIDENT'S statement made a good foundation for a policy. It imposed a cease fire order in the Chinese civil war. Though this was not the only reason for the American action, a Chinese truce not only was consistent with, but in fact was necessary to, the localization of the Korean conflict. A big battle over Formosa almost certainly would have become merged with the Korean battle.

But even if the truce can be enforced indefinitely by the American Seventh Fleet, our position will deteriorate politically all over Asia unless we take convincing measures to clarify and to justify our purposes in Formosa. We had better assume that in most of Asia and in large parts of Europe people are cynical about great powers and that our intentions in Formosa are suspect. Furthermore, both India and Britain have broken with Chiang, and a fight on our part to defend Formosa and Chiang's government there could not, we must assume, be approved in the Security Council.

The only way to deal with all that is to make it clear that our own intentions in Formosa are disinterested. That would have to mean that we would not seize Formosa for ourselves or hold it for Chiang. With that made clear, we could invite the other powers, especially the uncommitted powers of Asia, to take part in proposing a pacific settlement of the Formosan question.

IT IS essential, I believe, that we remove the impression that as our intervention in the Formosa Straits was unilateral, so will our settlement for Formosa be unilateral. Mr. Truman needs to do what Wilson and Roosevelt did before him: to make it clear to the world and to make it binding upon ourselves that we have not taken up arms for our own aggrandizement.

After all the very loose talk about the "American line" in the Far East, the President needs to clear the air about Formosa. This is not too difficult to do fairly soon for he does not have to, indeed he should not, make a blueprint of the settlement. He should only make a firm commitment of our own disinterestedness.

Beyond that lies another diplomatic action, which is more complicated. It consists in giving the world some indication of what we believe is the future of Korea, once the North Korean army has retired to the thirty-eighth parallel. For Korea will never become again just what it was before the fighting started.

Lucas Files Cloture Petition To Force FEPC Showdown

Senate Administration leaders yesterday moved to force the final showdown of the session on key civil rights legislation.

The test will come at 1 p. m. Wednesday on a petition to invoke debate-limiting cloture on the compulsory fair employment practices bill.

Apparently foredoomed by a trial vote last May, the buffeted FEPC bill was dusted off again for the second try, mainly for record-making purposes.

Senate Majority Leader Scott W. Lucas (Ill.) moved to call up the bill shortly after the Senate convened yesterday.

Later in the day he filed the cloture petition, signed by 44 Senators (17 Democrats and 27 Republicans).

Southern Senators were to talk at length if the need arose, but up until the petition was filed hardly a word had been spoken on FEPC.

Senator Wayne Morse (R., Oreg.) complained that Lucas was setting a bad precedent in demanding cloture "in advance of a filibuster." Morse called it "misuse and abuse" of the cloture rule and said the Senate would "rue the day" it used such tactics.

Lucas replied that the Senate debated FEPC at length last May and it would be "useless and futile," and a waste of Senate time, to hold up the cloture petition until the filibuster had developed. Under the cloture rule, a vote on the motion to limit debate is automatic after the petition is filed.

Constitutional two-thirds majority (64 Senators) is required to invoke cloture. On the last test, on May 19, civil rights advocates mustered a majority of only 52 to 32, 12 shy of the number needed.

These Senators signed the cloture petition: Lucas (Ill.), Myers (Pa.), Lehman (N. Y.), Anderson (N. Mex.), McMahon (Conn.), Benton (Conn.), Murray (Mont.), Douglas (Ill.), Green (R. I.), Humphrey (Minn.), Leahy (R. I.), Elbert Thomas (Utah), Chavez (N. Mex.), Kilgore (W. Va.), Neely (W. Va.), Magnuson (Wash.), Taylor (Idaho), all Democrats, and Wherry (Nebr.), Toby (N. H.), Jenner (Ind.), Capehart (Ind.), Donnell (Mo.), Hickenlooper (Ia.), Taft (Ohio), Knowland (Calif.), Saltonstall (Mass.), Lodge (Mass.), Thye (Minn.), Smith (N. J.), Kem (Mo.), Martin (Pa.), Schoeppel (Kans.), Ferguson (Mich.), Hendrickson (N. J.), Bricker (Ohio), McCarthy (Wis.), Aiken (Vt.), Darby (Kans.), Brewster (Me.), Watkins (Utah), Ives (N. Y.), Smith (Me.), Butler (Nebr.) and Flanders (Vt.), Republicans.

Record Vote Expected Today In South Carolina's Primary

Columbia, S. C., July 10 (U.P.)—Election fever hit South Carolina tonight on the eve of a Democratic primary expected to draw the largest vote in the State's history, in spite of rainy weather forecasts.

Voters will choose a new Governor, a Senator, four Representatives and a host of State and local officers Tuesday. More than 500,000 were registered for the election, and most Statewide candidates were expecting the total vote to reach between 375,000 and 400,000. Largest total in the past was 336,000, in 1938. Senator Olin D. Johnston, (D., S. C.) defeated the late Senator (Cotton) Ed Smith that year.

James F. Byrnes, Lester Bates, Thomas Pope and Marcus A. Stone, the four men in the gubernatorial race, all made last-minute speeches tonight.

Johnston and Governor J. Strom Thurmond, who fought a bitter campaign on personalities in the Senate race, both predicted confidently tonight they would win.

Polls will open at 8 a. m. and remain open to 6 p. m. in most of the State's 1570 precincts. In some rural areas, the polls will close at 4 p. m.

'Dixiecrat' Enters Maine Governor Race

Augusta, Me., July 10 (AP).—A "States' Rights" Democrat was nominated by petition today for Governor of Maine, creating a three-way contest in the September 11 election.

Leland B. Currier of Litchfield, three-time loser in Democratic primaries, termed himself a Maine "Dixiecrat."

The State election division certified 1038 signatures—38 more than needed—which Currier filed this morning. Certification puts the 48-year-old lumberman on the general election ballot with Earl S. Grant (D) of Portland, who defeated him in the June 19 primary, and Gov. Frederick G. Payne (R).

Not just a sniff of one brand, or a casual whiff of another—a quick inhale of this cigarette, an exhale of that. Not just hurried, one-puff experiments.

The sensible test, the "no-trick" test is to smoke Camels—and only Camels—for 30 days. Let your "T-Zone" decide.

Razing Started For Perpetual's New Building

By S. Oliver Goodman

Preliminary work on clearing the site for Perpetual Building Association's new home is under way.

Razing of the group of buildings fronting on E st. and 12th st. is expected to be completed in four to six weeks. Actual work on excavating and laying the foundation for the new six-story edifice will then be started.

Cost of the new building is estimated in the neighborhood of two million dollars. With more than 100,000 square feet, it will be the largest building and loan institution in physical size in the country. Present quarters at 11th and E sts. contain about 14,000 square feet.

A spokesman for the association, largest in the United States with resources of 110 million dollars, said plans call for the new building to front 200 feet on E st., 75 feet on 11th st. and 75 feet on 12th st. Entrance to the association's lobby will be on 11th st., entrance to the office building on E st., and the 12th st. side will have rental space.

The first floor will have a large lobby and balcony. Second floor will be occupied by the bookkeeping and files departments. Third floor will contain the directors' room, a public meeting hall and a cafeteria. Fourth, fifth and sixth floors will be rental space.

The basement will be used for auto parking.

While the construction work is underway, business will be conducted as usual in the old building. When the new structure is completed, the association will move into temporary quarters while the old building is torn down and the new part goes up.

Completion date is unpredictable, it was said, depending on too many unforeseeable factors, but target date is 18 months hence.

TV PICTURE: The pronounced weakness in television stocks yesterday and Friday appeared based on the notion that this consumer industry would be hit by production restrictions in the event of a rearmament program. Another factor was the possible effect of consumer credit controls which many observers feel are inevitable. The TV industry is currently selling a big part of its output on credit and controls might cut down sales.

Chicago Grain

Chicago, July 10 (AP).—Soybeans and lard jumped briskly forward while the rest of the market remained quiet on the Board of Trade today.

Buying in beans and lard reached its height after the Government announced a much lower cotton crop acreage estimate than had been expected. While the response to this was first noticeable in cotton, it wasn't long before the fats and oils markets began to romp ahead.

A reduced cotton crop will mean less cottonseed. That, in turn, will decrease the supply of cottonseed oil. And less cottonseed oil will mean a lessened total supply of fats and oils. On this premisis, traders bought soybeans, from which soybean oil is derived, and lard a shortening.

Wheat closed ⅜ lower to ¼ higher; corn ½ to 1 cent lower; oats ⅞ lower to ⅛ higher; rye ¼ to 1 cent higher; soybeans 4½-5¾ higher, and lard 10 to 30 cents a hundred pounds higher.

New York Cotton

New York, July 10 (AP).—Cotton futures spurted up in the daily trading limits of $10 a bale today as heavy trade and commission house buying was stimulated by a low Government estimate of 1950 cotton plantings. Nearby July delivery, of which there are no limits, closed $14 to $14.35 a bale above last Friday's close.

The Government forecast placing plantings at only 19,032,000 acres was considerably under trade ideas. It had an added impact on the market since dealers anticipate increased military demand for cotton.

The lowest recent private forecast was around 20,600,000 acres and some ideas have ranged up to better than 22,000,000 acres, compared with 1949 unrestricted plantings of 27,719,999 acres.

One on the Aisle—

Some Affectionate Views of Italy

By Richard L. Coe

"ESCAPE INTO DREAMS," at the Dupont, is a charming tour of Italy as seen through the memories of Italian POWs in a California camp.

Vittorio de Sica, who directed "Shoewhine" and "The Bicycle Thief," is one of the chief spirits behind this romantic and often humorous valentine. A writer and leading actor before he turned to direction, he returns to those aspects of film-making with suave skill.

The four men responsible for the picture, started in 1947, have stated that it was their purpose to "promote in Italians a sense of unity shattered by years of war." They decided to use as their local point the motley of prisoners likely to be gathered in a prisoner of war camp and imagined one in California; we follow their Christmas Eve memories via folk tunes an American officer gives them with a phonograph.

To popularize their idea among the Italians for whom the picture was primarily made, top-flight stars of the Italian films play the leads for each slight incident. De Sica, who hasn't acted for some years, proves an able player. You also see Aldo Fabrizi, so fine in "Open City" and "To Live in Peace;" Massimo Girotti, whom you'll recall as Magnani's leading man in "Woman Trouble" and Peppino de Filippo, whose family is part of Neapolitan theatrical history. All have roles neatly suited to their metiers.

"ESCAPE INTO DREAMS." Minerva release, produced by Giuseppe Amato. Story by Michele Galdieri; screen play by Galdieri, Amato, Vittorio de Sica, Aldo Fabrizi. Photographed by Mario Baba and Ferrer Tiezzi. Directed in Italy by Pietro Francisci. At the Dupont.

THE CAST

Duke of Letignano	Vittoria de Sica
The General	Aldo Fabrizi
The Coachman	Peppino de Filippo
The Gondolier	Massimo Girotti
Chaplain	Carlo Campanini
The Milanese	Alberto Rabagliati
The Florentine	Aldo Fiorelli
American Captain	Michael Tor
American Sergeant	Adolfo Celi

The picture, then, is decidedly romantic. Venice, Naples, Florence, Rome, Milan and even scorned Sicily, have their precious memories in the hearts of each dreamer. The Venetian gondolier recalls the numberless women who've wanted his love from time to time. The Florentine student thinks of the marriage-by-proxy which will give his son a name. The Roman father recalls his prattling wife and their six children. Even the chaplain can sing a song from Bologna.

Equally revealing in this sentimental parade is the Italian view of Americans. The sergeant we see is far from a likable fellow, brusque, slangy, gum-chewing. So that, one says to oneself, is how we seem. Yet, before Christmas Eve is over, the attitude toward what I'm sure was considered "the average American" has softened. Fortunately, too, for this aspect of the picture, there is a sympathetic portrayal of the American captain. Both roles are played by Italian actors.

Wry Humor

Mixed with the proudly romantic atmosphere of the picture is a folksy humor that you will do well to recognize immediately and enjoy. There is tongue in cheek about the philandering Roman father, the aristocratic duke who has no realization that when he can't pay his debts others can't pay theirs, either, an dthe gondolier with the beautiful eyes who brightens the loneliness of feminine visitors.

Altogether, it's a kindly light "Escape Into Dreams" throws from the Bridge of Sighs, the Pitti Palace with its Botticelli "Spring," the landmarks of the Tiber and the boisterous Bay of Naples.

WISH YOU WERE HERE—Laura Elliott, the Paramount player, has been scribbling post cards about how pleasant summertime can be. Right, huh?

HARVEY L. RABBITT, the Southern building lawyer, is mighty used to cracks about his name and that Mary Chase comedy of Harvey, the invisible rabbit . . . The Two-T Rabbitt is a mighty good sport about it, which some people aren't always when it comes to jokes about their names . . . Of a Maryland family, Mr. Rabbitt has lived here many years, attended the opening night of Frank Fay's run at the National and was sorry indeed to miss a "Harvey" anniversary party at Gotham's Sardi's . . . The Olney is inviting him to any performance of the Stuart Erwin production he can fit into a busy week.

A SNEAK PREVIEW is set for the Warner Wednesday night between the last two showings of "Rogues of Sherwood Forest." . . . Hints as to the title? . . . Well, it's a Paramount Picture and William Holden was understandably talking about it the other day while shooting scenes for "Born Yesterday."

THE WINSLOW BOY for Olney will be David Cole, the young lad who scored so handsomely in "The Innocents." . . . With Basil Rathbone as the icy attorney, the Rattigan drama is set for the week of August 8 . . . Michael Newell, who created the part in England and introduced it to America, was older than the part he was playing by the time he'd opened here, but David, who's 11, is younger.

"THE WHITE TOWER" will continue a second week at Keith's, which gives another week to that review-writing contest to be judged by the four local drama editors . . . Who are, it might be added, in a spot: They wrote their pieces on the Glorious Fourth, though evidently well enough to have gotten the picture off to its extended run.

TONIGHT'S OPENINGS: Besides "Harvey," with Stuart Erwin and Dora Clement at Olney, there's: "Rain," with Ethel Casey in the Jeanne Eagles roles, starting a two-week run at the Cross Roads; "They Knew What They Wanted," going into its second week at Collingwood on the Mount Vernon Highway; "Skylark," opening at the Straw Hat Players in McLean, Va.

It's Raschi vs. Roberts in Today's All-Star Game

This Morning

With Shirley Povich

CHICAGO, July 10.—The nearest thing to an official league rebuke to a club manager was made in secrecy today by American League club owners. They were taking a dim view of All-Star Manager Casey Stengel's selection of three of his Yankee pitchers, Vic Raschi, Allie Reynolds and Tommy Byrne, to the A. L. team.

So they voted that in future the A. L. All-Star pitching staff must be composed of one man off each of the eight clubs in the league, with the team manager having no voice except in naming of one pitcher.

POVICH

Each manager in the league will name one of his pitchers to the All-Stars, "and it will be as good a staff as anybody can choose," declared one club owner. "Every team has one pitcher good enough for the All-Stars."

The A. L. action was taken independently of the National League which can go along choosing its pitchers any way it likes, said an American League man who added, "it won't make any difference. We have them outclassed."

THE ANNUAL All-Star game is most important to the clubs in the two-team towns like Chicago, St. Louis, Philadelphia, New York and Boston. That's where the clubs that are down in the race can gloat "we're in a better league," if their All-Stars happen to win.

The two biggest All-Star feudists are the league presidents, Will Harridge and Ford Frick. For all his friendship with Frick, Harridge enjoys the discomfiture of his opposite number of the N. L. when the American League keeps winning these All-Star games.

In fact, a few years back Harridge said bluntly on a radio network broadcast "I'd rather see our league win the All-Star game than the World Series.'

THE BLEAT OF National League Manager Burt Shotton, who attempted to overturn the fans vote and get permission to play his Dodger, Duke Snider, in center field, gained him only mock sympathy from A. L. circles. Shotton complained that the fans had neglected to vote a center fielder on the team and that Hank Sauer of the Cubs would thus be playing out of position.

"We hate to see the National League suffering, we'll loan 'em a center fielder," said one A. L. official. As it happens we have some pretty good ones in Dom DiMaggio, Joe DiMaggio and Larry Doby. Too bad the National can't dig one up."

The fact is that Manager Casey Stengel of the A. L. has the same kind of complaint as Shotton. The fans' voting gave him some powerful center and left fielders, but no experienced right fielder.

That post will go to Left Fielder Hoot Evers of the Tigers, who never played right in his major league career, but the A. L. has risen above the temptation to squawk about it.

THE AMAZING THING about tomorrow's All-Star game is that as good a ball player as Phil Rizutto, who ranked one-two among the league's shortstops for the most of the last 10 years, is actually a freshman in the All-Star lineup.

How the fans have overlooked Rizutto for most of a decade is the baffling mystery of the series.

IF THE NATIONAL League is going to win another All-Star game, the signs for a victory this year are somewhat favorable. They've won only four of the 16, you know, in 1936-'38-'40-'44. Always in an even-numbered year, and this is 1950. Get it?

OF THE 18 PLAYERS on the first A. L. All-Star team in 1933—that was the player-limit then—only five are still active in baseball. They are Joe Cronin, general manager of the Red Sox; Jimmy Dykes, assistant manager of the A's; and Coaches Al Simmons, Rick Ferrell and Bill Dickey, of the Indians, Tigers and Yankees.

THAT STRIKEOUT PITCHING isn't a vital factor in the All-Star games is demonstrated by the figures which show that National League pitchers lead by a wide margin, with 107 whiff victims to 87 by the A. L. In the important run-making department—ball games are won by runs, it seems—the A. L. leads by an even bigger margin, 78 to 52.

THE CHICAGO WHITE SOX were honored by being named the host club of the 1950 All-Star game, and it could be a costly honor. The White Sox will pick up a hefty tab for the entertainment of visiting dignitaries from both leagues, with fancy food and refreshments for hundreds of officials plus the press. They won't break even on their concession profits from the 49,000 fans in their park.

Laurel Card Rained Out After 1st Race

Heavy rains washed out Laurel raceway's harness program last night after only the first race had been run.

The cancellation caused Laurel raceway to lose one of its allotted twenty nights for the 1950 season because its three rain allowance nights have already been used.

The $10,000 Maryland Cup Stakes for trotters listed for last night will be staged tonight. Fourteen trotters, which include some of the best in the country, will go to the post in quest of one of the richest prizes offered this summer on any track.

The Joe Hylan entry of Tompkins Hanover and Buckshot B owned by Marty Burke of Troy, N. Y., is the favorite in the well matched field.

The first race was won by the longest shot in the field, Fairfax Hanover, which paid $25.40, $13.60 and $7.60. Scoop finished second and Hilda Rosecroft third.

The victor, driven by Pat Hubbard, drew away from his opponents in the mud and scored by some 10 lengths.

Only a total of $22,754 was bet on the first and second in the daily double. The double was treated as a straight pool and betters who took the winner in the first, Fairfax Hanover number eight, with any horse in the second received $69.40 for each two dollar ticket.

FIRST RACE—One mile. Purse, $700; 2? conditioned; 2-year-olds and up. Trot. Winner, George P. Flezar's br. h. (8), by Lawrence Hanover-Pola McElwyn. Trained by M. Hubbard. Start good. Won handily, place same, show driving. Time, 2:19¾.

Majors Hear Video Report

Chicago, July 10 (AP). — The major leagues today relaxed their March 1 deadline for the start of spring training, and heard an alarming report on the effects of television and radio on minor league attendance.

Players now may report, on invitation only, any time before March 1. First spring exhibition games may not be played before the second Saturday in March, a joint National-American League meeting ruled.

A drop of one million fans for the first month of minor league play was reported to the two major groups by George M. Trautman, president of the National Association of Professional Baseball Leagues.

Trautman credited the decrease mainly to broadcast and television of major league games in minor league cities.

The American-National League meeting followed a session between baseball's executive council and two player representatives—Shortstop Marty Marion of the St. Louis Cardinals and Pitcher Freddy Hutchinson of the Detroit Tigers.

The players had presented a seven-point program, one of which was the relaxation of the spring training starting date.

Cuban Martinez Joins Nats, Ortiz Takes on Another Job

Manager Bucky Harris, of the Nats, was heartened last night by the arrival of Pitcher Rogelio Martinez from Havana, but Outfielder Roberto Ortiz took a dim view of the newcomer's presence.

"My trouble is starting all over again new," sighed the sad Senor Ortiz one minute after meeting Martinez at the airport. "He do not speak English also. That make three I speak for now, Marrero, Consuegra and now him. I ask for raise tomorrow."

Ortiz's chief value to Manager Harris this season is not as a pinch-hitter, but as an interpreter for the Nats' fast-growing Cuban colony. With Martinez on the staff, the Havana contingent now numbers four with Ortiz the only one to speak English.

To make room for Martinez, the Nats sent Bob Ross, the 21-year-old lefthander, back to Chattanooga for seasoning. The Nats also announced that Outfielder Gil Coan, out since June 2 with a fractured skull, will be placed on the active list today and will return to duty Thursday against Detroit.

Well-Built Muchacho

Martinez may have linguistic trouble, but he appears well equipped physically. He's a handsome, rugged-looking muchacho, built much on the order of Cleveland's Mike Garcia, who not only pitches well, but who also speaks English well.

Through Interpreter Ortiz, it was learned that the newcomer is 28 years old, weighs 190 and is two inches shorter than six feet.

"He says he is righthanded pitcher with fast ball and sinker," Ortiz reported after a zippy 20-second conference with Martinez. "His first name is Rogelio, but in Cuba they give him nickname of Limonar, the town where he came from."

The Nats ordered Martinez up 20 days ago, but an injury to his knee and visa trouble delayed his arrival until last night, Ortiz explained.

Should Be a Help

"He has record of 10 and 4 with Havana and says he thinks he can help our team," Ortiz added after another exchange of rolled R's with the grinning, bronzed Martinez.

At this point, Senor Consuegra, also on hand to meet him, interrupted to tell Ortiz—according to Ortiz:

"I know he can help. He better pitcher than me and I already win three."

Martinez, according to Ortiz, says Cubans are not mad over Clark Griffith's raids on his Havana team. "They all happy we are doing so good. Mr. Griffith is a big hero in Cuba, almost as big as Consuegra and Marrero."

Giants Sell John Jorgenson, Buy Jim Hearn From Cards

Chicago, July 10 (AP).—The New York Giants today sold Infielder Johnny Jorgensen to their Minneapolis farm club in the American Association for an undisclosed sum.

The third baseman, used sparingly this season by both the Brooklyn Dodgers and the Giants, had a .128 batting average.

The Giants bought him from the Dodgers May 17.

At the same time the Giants announced purchase of Pitcher Jim Hearn from St. Louis Cardinals for the $10,000 waiver price.

Ike Williams, Costner Try to Go Again Tonight

Philadelphia, July 10 (AP).—Lightweight Champion Ike Williams will have to wait 24 hours to prove his worth as a challenger for the welterweight boxing championship of the world.

Tonight's 10-round fight between Williams and George (Sugar) Costner was postponed until tomorrow night because of rain. Williams hopes to use an impressive victory over Costner as a springboard to a welterweight title fight with Champion Ray (Sugar) Robinson.

Maharajah Helps Kramer Lose in Tennis

La Jolla, Calif., July 10 (AP).—Jack Kramer of professional tennis fame and his teammate, the Maharajah of Kutch, from India, ran second in a special round-robin mixed doubles tournament yesterday at the La Jolla Beach and Tennis Club.

Pep Keeps His Word—Says 'I Do'

By Morris Siegel
Post Reporter

World's Featherweight Champion Willie Pep got himself married and "divorced" all within four hours yesterday.

At 10:30 a. m. he married Dolores von Frenkell at Elkton, Md. At 2:30 p. m., the National Boxing Association divorced him from all boxing activity for failure to show up for his fight with Bobby Bell, scheduled for Griffith Stadium last night.

The suspension will be lifted as soon as Pep fulfills his contract to fight Bell, probably late this month.

Neither development was an upset. Last Friday the will-o-the-wisp 126-yound champion wired his manager, Lou Viscusi, in Hartford, Conn., "Am getting married. See you in a week."

When the NBA learned of it, it immediately announced Pep would be suspended if he failed to make an appearance for his fight here with Bell. Both Pep and the NBA kept their words.

Mystery at First

Since last Friday, when he mysteriously skipped out of Hartford to launch the first phase of his spectacular matrimonial venture—the second for him and his bride—the whereabouts of Pep had constituted a first class mystery.

Not until 2 p. m. yesterday, the hour he was scheduled to weigh in for last night's fight, was the mystery cleared. Manager Viscusi phoned the District Boxing Commission the glad tidings.

"I just heard from Willie," the jubilant Viscusi told Chairman Heinie Miller of the District Boxing Commission. "He got married in Elkton, Md., at 10:30 this morning."

"Congratulations," Miller answered. "He's hereby suspended in all NBA territory until he fulfills his contract here."

Occupation—"None"

Pep applied for his marriage license last Saturday morning at Elkton. The license was granted yesterday morning and 30 minutes later he was married by the Rev. R. J. Sturgill, a Baptist minister, one of Elkton's "marrying parsons."

The license was issued in the name of William Papaleo, Pep's real name. Pep gave his age as 27. His bride, who also lives in Hartford, said she was 22.

"I didn't know who he was," the Rev. Sturgill said. On his application for a license he listed his occupation as 'none'."

Rev. Sturgill said he didn't know where the newlyweds were going on their honeymoon but assumed they were "going back to Rehoboth Beach where they said they've been since Saturday."

"Ain't That Nice"

Promoter Goldie Ahearn, looking "all frazzled out," as he put it, rejoiced over the news.

"Ain't that nice?" he asked sweetly when told that Pep had actually been married. "He's a sweet guy, she's a sweet gal and what he done is the greatest thing in the world for boxing. And what a fight it should be when him and Bell meet later this month."

Only this last Sunday Ahearn had anything but compliments for Pep, threatening to "suit" him for everything from arson to alienation of affection.

"What a Lover"

"That's real love, that's all. What a boxer, what a lover, what a fighter and what a fight I'm gonna have now," the jubilant Ahearn beamed.

"I'm gonna have the biggest cake in the world baked and when Pep comes down here later this month to train for the fight I'm gonna give him and his bride the cake in my gymnasium. Ain't that nice?"

There was no answer.

Ahearn will talk to Clark Griffith this morning and arrange for a new date for the non-title fight. Persons who bought tickets in advance for last night's show can use same when the fight is held, Ahearn said.

"Are they gonna fight?" Ahearn asked when he was asked if the fight would be held later. "And how they're gonna fight now. Pep ought to be ready in two weeks. After all, how long can a guy honeymoon?"

Again, there was no answer.

Women's Golf Rained Out

Baltimore, July 10 (AP).—A steady downpour of rain forced postponement of today's qualifying play in the Maryland State Women's Amateur Golf Tournament.

Tournament officials said the tourney will begin tomorrow if the Suburban Club course is playable.

About 60 players, including 1949 Champion Mary Ann Downey of Baltimore, are expected to compete.

Mrs. A. B. Bower of Manor Country Club, women's District of Columbia golf champion, and Mrs. Betty Meckley of Kenwood, District runner up, lead the Washington area contingent.

Attlesey Sets New Hurdle Mark

Helsinki, Finland, July 10 (AP).—Dick Attlesey of Southern California cracked the world record for the 110-meter high hurdles tonight with a time of 13.5 seconds.

The 6-foot 4-inch athlete bettered the world mark by two-tenths of a second . It was held jointly by Fred Wolcott of Rice and Spec Townes of Georgia.

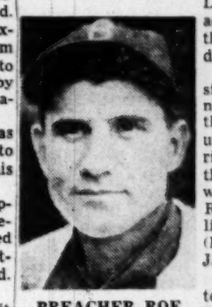
It is the second time this year Aattlesey has surpassed world high hurdle marks. He first bettered the 110-meter record in the National AAU meet with 13.6 at Washington last month.

Phils' 'Bonus Baby' Seeks To End American Whammy Of 12 Victories in 16 Starts

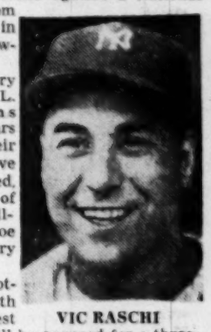
By Shirley Povich
Post Reporter

Chicago, July 10—The Major League All-Star game returns tomorrow to the city of its birth—17 years ago—and marked tonight, at least, by a monotonous sameness with the National League in the underdog role again.

American League All-Stars who have won 12 of the 16 games played will enter tomorrow's contest as 8-to-5 favorites against a National League chafing from accumulated defeats in this one-game showdown.



PREACHER ROE



VIC RASCHI

Without a victory since 1944, the N. L. nevertheless visions the end of five years under the heel of their rivals. They believe they're going in loaded, with a pitching trio of Robin Roberts (Phillies), Preacher Roe (Brooklyn) and Larry Jansen (Giants).

Manager Burt Shotton will lead off with Roberts, the youngest pitcher ever to start an All-Star game. He will be opposed for a three-inning limit by Manager Casey Stengel's choice, Vic Raschi, from his own Yankees.

* * * * * *

The 23-year-old Roberts, sophomore "bonus baby" with poise and control, has won 10 games and lost only three this season, and all of his victories have been complete games. He's a fast-baller who in Raschi will be opposing a man with a 10-6 record.

As 49,000 prepared to storm Comiskey Park which has been sold out for a fortnight, Shotton announced his pitching rotation. "It will be Roberts to start with, then Roe, then Jansen," he said. "But if we have a lead, Jim Konstanty of the Phils may finish up instead of Jansen."

Stengel wasn't as positive about the A. L. pitching schedule. "Allie Reynolds and Bob Lemon will be warming up from the start," he said. "We'll see how Raschi does." Such redoubtables as Bob Feller, Art Houtteman and Ted Gray of the Tigers; and Ray Scarborough of the White Sox are at his back.

It's the fans' ball game, with the lineups, aside from the pitchers, of their own choosing in Nation-wide balloting and Shotton and Stengel are committed to start the players who drew the most votes for each position.

As usual, the fans voted for the power hitters, and as usual it is the American League which is taking the most-loaded bats into the contest.

No Clear Edge

The American League outfield of Ted Williams, Hoot Evers and Larry Doby, despite its home run talents, will have no clear edge, if any, over the National League trio of Ralph Kiner, Stan Musial and the Cubs' lone representative Hank Sauer.

In the over-all figures, though, the A. L. will be presenting a solid array of .300 hitters with the exception of Boston's second baseman Bobby Doerr, who is batting .284.

The National League will field only five .300 hitters, with Kiner, Sauer and Shortstop Marty Marion falling below that figure.

The Red Sox will be the most heavily-represented club in the starting lineups with their 1950 sensation, .343-hitting rookie Walt Dropo, at first base; Doerr at second and Williams in left field.

Among the cognoscenti, the National League is conceded a bit of an edge in the All-Star pitching with such as Roberts, Roe and Jansen working. The A. L. has failed to produce as transcendant a star this season.

And the speed will be with the

McNair Ousted In Mid-Atlantic Net Tourney

By Gordon Beard

Seeded players advanced without the loss of a set as the Middle Atlantic tennis championships completed its third day of play at the Kenwood Golf and Country Club yesterday.

Fifth-seeded Arnold Saul of San Diego, Calif., the Nation's seventeenth ranking player, encountered the stiffest opposition while defeating Fred McNair of the host Kenwood club, 6—2, 7—5.

First-seeded Earl Cochell and third-ranked Hugh Stewart, University of Southern California teammates, were sidelined with injuries and their respective matches were postponed until today.

Both stars were under doctor's orders to remain in bed for 24 hours. Stewart has an infected right foot and Cochell a groin injury.

Two seeded players saw action for the first time yesterday. Jim Brink, seeded second, defeated Capt. Bob Speer of Annapolis,

It's Raschi Vs. Roberts in Today's Game

National Leaugers, with such as Jackie Robinson, and the Cardinals' tremendous pair, Stan Musial and Enos Slaughter, in action.

An edge in the catching, too, is believed to be with the N. L., in the presence of the Dodgers' Negro ace, Roy Campanella, whose opposite number will be Yogi Berra dangerous at bat, but never before recognized as All-Star catching timber.

Both Shotton and Stengel, given the office to win the game by their respective league presidents, are on record that no attempt will be made to use all of the players on their squads. "We'll go with the fellows we think will win for us, and we may make no changes outside of the pitchers," said Shotton and Stengel echoed those sentiments.

Second baseman Cass Michaels the Nats' lone representative on the team, will under-study Bobby Doerr, with no certainty that he will get into the game. His likeliest chance is that Doerr may be extracted for a pinch hitter, if the A. L. is trailing at any point.

Raschi does not have as distinguished a record as his starting rival, Roberts, but Stengel's selection of him to open the game for the A. L. found nobody quarreling with it. Raschi has pitched six innings in recent All-Star games, and the N. L. hasn't been able to get a run off him.

Ft. Belvoir Leads Golf

Fort Belvoir took the lead in first round play of the Military District of Washington golf tournament held on their home course yesterday with a low 418. North Post, Fort Myer, was second with 427., and South Post, Fort Myer, was third with 436.

If the Engineers continue their pace tomorrow, they'll earn the right to represent the Washington area in the All-Army Tournament at Fort Monmouth, N. J., next month.

Captain K. L. Lynch of North Post, Fort Myer, turned in the low individual score of the day with a three-over-par 73. Maj. M. L. Raley, Army Security Agency, was second with 76.

The high brass turned up two good golfers, Maj. Gen. George Decker, Pentagon A. C., and Maj. Gen. Floyd L., whose 76 earned a tie for second, Parks, Chief of Army Information, who was fourth. Master Sergt. Joseph Smith, South Post, Fort Myer was fifth with a 78.

Tommy Reese got two singles and a triple and drove in all nine runs yesterday as he pitched and batted Suitland to a 9-8 victory over Laurel in the first game of a three-game playoff series in the Southern Maryland Junior American Legion baseball league.

$5,80 Shot Gets Home By 4 Lengths

By Walter Haight
Post Reporter

Charles Town, W. Va., July 10.—Running like the flagship in a regatta, P. A. Rothfuss' Dandy Foot led all the way in the Bladensburg Purse, featuring a program conducted over a sloppy track and under showery skies. Ten sophomores competed and Dandy Foot steered by Apprentice Jockey Doyle Gardner, finished four lengths in advance of Mrs. D. N. Lee's Remembrance. A half length farther back came G. G. Waugh's Jr.'s Wheaten to be third.

Dandy Foot, a son of Boss Hoss and Toy Foot, was clocked in 1:23 for the 6½ furlongs and those who helped make him the favorite collected a $5.80 win mutuel.

Except for a few strides at the opening, Dandy Foot held a lead of from four to five lengths throughout.

McKinney and Hickman's Free Valley, out of the one-time speed champion Washoe Valley, won the day's secondary feature, the fifth race. The Washington-owned 7-year-old, with Ray Arduini, a Capital City boy, in the saddle,

P. A. Rothfuss' Gain A'Foot was second, a neck in front of the LaSalle Stable's Locust Valley, no relation to the winner. Free Valley paid $6.40 and was clocked in :50 4-5, excellent time in the going.

Two of the oldest horses on the grounds won the key races to produce a $39.40 daily double pay-off on the 7 and 10 combination. J. T. Kirby's Skin Deep, 13, took the opener and J. R. Tucker's Victim 10, accounted for the second event.

DEAR FOLKS: With the closing of this track on Saturday most of the horses will head for Wheeling W. Va., and North Randall, Ohio. There's no minor track racing here abouts until Belair opens August 16. By the way, Ray Bryson, Mr. Big at Belair, would like to make the meeting a night affair. The Charlestown American Legion has a baseball park topped by none in the state and is busy at present raising money to install lights. The jockeys and mutuel employes are helping Thursday with a soft ball game starting at 6:30 p. m. All they do is will be there to either root or play or both. Alan Clarke, owner, trainer, and former big league pitcher will be asked to umpire. See you on the side lines. Bill.

Detroit Draws Glittering Field for Gold Cup Classic

By Happy Walker

THIS YEAR WILL undoubtedly see the largest fleet of Goldcuppers in the history of the Detroit racing classic. Prior to the war, the Gold Cup monsters were limited to 732 cu. in. displacement. That restriction was set aside primarily to permit the use of the Allison wartime motor, so that now it's the unlimited hydroplane class.

Walker

How far the Goldcuppers will go is hard to tell, what with materials and money seemingly unlimited. The big gliders will be out en masse for the Gold Cup classic on July 22 on the Detroit River, so we present the latest scratch sheet on the multi-thousand dollar babies.

S. S. "Stan" Sayres, west coast automotive tycoon, and the man who recently cracked the 11-year-old world speed mark at 160.3235 M.P.H. will be the odds-on favorite. Rumor has it that the new speed crown holder, who would rather play classical music with his better half than smash speedboat records, will not drive in the Gold Cup classic. Ted Jones, Slo-Mo-Shun designer, is slated to pilot the world record holder.

DETROIT'S DOSSIN Brothers will have their new Miss Pepsi off the drawing boards. John Hacker and Ed MacKenzie are designing and building Miss Pepsi—35 ft. long, 9 feet, 3 inches in the beam, with twin Allisons in line will be the most powerful and longest Gold Cup so far. Chuck Thompson will probably be at the wheel.

Lombardo—just Guy to most folks—trailed his revamped Tempo VI down to Wilson Point Men's club regretta June 17, and despite a course designed for 48s, navigated the 15-mile special event quite satisfactorily. Dan Arena has added five feet to the former record holder and two feet to the sponsons which make her easier to handle regardless of water conditions.

HORACE DODGE CLAIMS to have upped the My Sweetie about 15 miles on the straightaway. Bill Cantrell's superlative driving is quite an obstacle to hurdle, so the My Sweetie will again be a top contender. D. Cameron Peck's Astraea, never a serious contender, is for sale—so, that one is unpredictable.

The latest report is that Danny Foster of the original Miss Golden Gate team of Arena and Foster, and three-time winner for the Dossin Brothers in 1947 will be at the wheel of the Jack Schafer entry Such Crust I. Foster is another triple threat.

Several blanks must be filled in—they are: (1) Harry Lynn's La-ha-la; (2) Jack Schafer's Such Crust II; (3) Ernie Wilson's Miss Canada and (4) Henry Kaiser's Aluminum I. Also, what about Harmsworth Trophy holder Stanley Dollar? There is always that chance that some unknown will break into the winning circle with owners being as secretive as they are.

easy sailing in the House and would face its major opposition in the Senate.

The plan could become law only if a constitutional majority of either branch of Congress had not disapproved it.

The Senate committee on Executive Expenditures yesterday reported out a resolution of disapproval introduced by Senator Robert H. Taft (R., Ohio).

Voting against the President's plan were Chairman John McClellan (D., Ark.), and Senators James O. Eastland (D., Miss.), Clyde R. Hooey (D., N. C.), Irving M. Ives (R., N. Y.), Karl E. Mundt (R., S. D.) and Andrew Schoeppel (R., Kan.).

Voting for it were Senators Hubert Humphrey (D., Minn.), William Benton (D., Conn.) and Margaret Chase Smith (R., Me.).

The Senate vote on the Taft resolution had been scheduled for Wednesday.

House Republican Whip Charles A. Halleck (Ind.) told members the vote would "put you on one side or another in the issue of socialization of medicine."

Representative Chet Holifield (D., Calif.) termed the talk about socialized medicine only "a smokescreen."

House Democratic Leader John McCormack (D., Mass.) charged the Republicans with continually seeking to block progress.

Representative Carroll Kearns (R., Pa.) termed the measure "a step backwards." He said the Congress should take the Office of Education "out of the hands of politicians" and place it in the hands of educators.

Austrian Treaty Talks Suspended Until September

London, July 10 (U.P.).—The Western powers conferred today with Russia for the 256th time today on the Austrian peace treaty but reached tentative agreement on only one point—to suspend the talks again.

The conferees decided to adjourn until September after a two-hour exchange of charges between Soviet Delegate Georgi Zarubin and the American, British and French Foreign Ministers' deputies.

Zarubin maintain the Austrian treaty could not be completed until there was a settlement of Trieste "question." He charged the West with violating the Italian peace treaty on Trieste and said Russia could not conclude another treaty until those alleged violations were rectified.

Senate Confirms Sumner Pike as Atomic Commissioner

Cyril Smith Incident

Most of the debate, therefore, centered on the last point, the so-called "Cyril Smith" incident.

As Hickenlooper described it, an AEC scientist, Dr. Smith, was sent to London in July, 1948, to discuss various atomic matters with British governmental atomic project workers. The discussion was to cover various items on which information could be exchanged under terms of a modus vivendi between the British and American Governments.

But one item in Dr. Smith's orders, Hickenlooper said, related to the metallurgy of plutonium, the atomic explosive. This, relating to weapons, could not be discussed with foreign scientists, under terms of the American Atomic Energy Act.

Rear Admiral John E. Gingrich, the AEC's security officer, brought the matter to the attention of Lewis Strauss, then a member of the commission. He, in turn, took it up with Hickenlooper. The two of them, joined by Senator Vandenberg (R., Mich.), took the matter to the then Secretary of Defense, James V. Forrestal, and to Donald Carpenter, the military liaison officer with the AEC.

According to Hickenlooper, it took their combined pressure to force Pike, then acting chairman, to countermand Dr. Smith's instructions, an act effected by Transatlantic phone, in time to prevent him from revealing information on the item to the British.

But McMahon declared that Pike acted quickly to countermand the orders as soon as Strauss brought the matter to Pike's attention. He read a memorandum from Carpenter indicating that by the time he, Carpenter, reached Pike to talk about Smith's mission, Pike had already sent two cables to Smith and was trying to reach him by telephone.

. . . Smiling After His Victory

In the debate yesterday, Colorado Senators Millikin (R.) and Johnson (D.) frankly admitted that part of their opposition to Pike came from his refusal to develop Colorado supplies of low-grade uranium ore as fast as they deemed desirable.

Millikin, paraphrasing Churchill, said, "I was not sent to the Senate to preside over the liquidation of Colorado."

The two Westerners were roundly pummelled for the position by Majority Leader Lucas (D., Ill.), and Senator Connally (D., Tex.). They pointed out that by Millikin's own argument, Pike was trying to obtain as much uranium ore from foreign sources as possible, saving America's reserves for a "great emergency."

Connally regaled the Senate with an account of the Congressional Committee's hearing on Pike's qualifications.

"There sat Pike in front of 'em," Connally recounted. "I challenged 'em"—the Republican committee members—"but I couldn't get a chirp out of 'em.

"I challenged 'em and they looked 'way out over his head at Korea."

McMahon, summing up, said he listened to two hours of debate and could not find out what the Republicans were objecting to, or what was the specific opposition they had to Pike.

It was, he said, much the same situation as that described in Thomas Brown's Seventeenth Century quatrain:

I do not love thee, Dr. Fell,
The reason why I cannot tell:
But this alone I know full well,
I do not love thee, Dr. Fell.

McMahon told the Senate that although Pike had been acting chairman of the AEC for the past five months, it was his conviction Pike would not be named to the chairmanship.

At the White House yesterday there were rumors that President Truman was on the verge of selecting a man to fill that position. The name of Dr. Wilson M. Compton, president of the State College of Washington, was prominently mentioned as the choice.

The Senate vote on Pike's confirmation:

1. A TOOLMAKER FOR MORE THAN 50 YEARS is the record of Walter Griffith, who made parts for the first car built by Alexander Winton in 1895. With a background including work on White Steamer and Peerless automobiles and an association with Horace and John Dodge, Griffith got a job with Ford Motor Company in 1920. Until his retirement on Dec. 29, 1949, he worked daily at his bench in Ford's immense tool and die room.

2. WITH SECURITY AND INDEPENDENCE in his future, Griffith made plans to retire in September, 1949, when he read about a pension for retiring Ford, Lincoln and Mercury workers in an employee publication. The story assured him that he would have an adequate monthly income for the rest of his life

3. PUNCHING OUT FOR THE LAST TIME, Griffith said good-bye to his co-workers on the afternoon of Dec. 29, 1949. A member of the Automobile Old-Timers, he participated in the 1946 Golden Jubilee along with the late Henry Ford, Barney Oldfield and Frank Duryea. Their voices were recorded for the future.

4. RELAXING AT HOME, Walter and Edna Griffith enjoy a quiet game. They have celebrated their 50th wedding anniversary and own their own home in Dearborn, located near the homes of three of their four children. Mr. Griffith lectures and writes about Detroit's early days. She quilts, crochets. Both are active in church and clubs.

WHAT'S GOING ON AT FORD...

AFTER 30 YEARS— A SECURE OLD AGE

Another "Ford First" benefits oldest living auto mechanic

On April 1, 1950, hundreds of Ford old-timers, who have retired since last July after years of service, received their first pension checks under the new pension plan which Ford set up last year.

Industry observers see the Ford retirement plan as a progressive step in a program of employee benefits which recalls the famous $5-a-day wage of years ago, the 8-hour day, and the 5-day week. All were pioneered in the automobile industry by Ford Motor Company.

The pension supplements U. S. Social Security benefits, calls for the payment of millions of dollars annually into the pension fund.

More than 1,100 Ford, Lincoln and Mercury employees who have met age and service requirements are already taking advantage of the pension plan. Thousands more are being given an adjustment period to get their affairs in shape before retirement. Employees who are 65 with 30 years of service, retire with the full $100 a month which includes Social Security benefits. Workers with less service at 65 can retire at a scaled-down pension.

One of Ford's happy, retired men is 80-year-old Walter Griffith, whose claim that he was the oldest on-the-job automotive mechanic in the United States before he left Ford Motor Company last December, never has been challenged. Over the years, Ford has studied many plans for giving loyal workers like Griffith security in their old age, has adopted the one that promises to work the best.

This program is part of "the Ford idea" since it benefits the employees, Ford Motor Company, and the public.

5. "DID YOU HELP BUILD IT, GRANDPA?" Nancy, Bonnie, and June Kendeigh, three of Mr. Griffith's 12 grandchildren, ask him when he takes them to see an old Winton automobile. He delights to tell them stories about famous automotive men he knew in his youth. Most of the old-timers are gone now. But Walter Griffith, very much alive, and happy, looks forward to secure years made possible through the regular income provided by his Ford Motor Company pension plus his wife's own Social Security benefits.

Senate's Budget Figure Tops House Job Total Only About $6 Million

The budget bill approved by the Senate Appropriations Committee recommends only about $6,000,000 more than the House-approved bill to pay salaries of civilian employes.

In addition, nearly all of the increase would merely restore cuts made by the House. It isn't new money, and no big lot of new employes could be hired with it. In fact, fewer than 2000 jobs are involved in the increase.

This is the breakdown on additional funds earmarked by the Senate committee to pay civilian personnel: Air Force, $2,925,000; Army, $1,657,322; Navy, $533,000; National Security Resources Board, $500,000, and Defense Secretary, $300,000.

This, of course, is peanuts in comparison with what will be needed if the Korean crisis grows worse.

In fact, military people have begun to beg some of the civilians fired only a few months ago under Defense Secretary Johnson's alleged economy program to return to work.

BOND BILL: An objection by Representative Cunningham (R., Iowa), prevented House approval yesterday of the Karsten bill to have Uncle Sam buy and pay for the surety bonds Federal workers are required to carry.

During a brief discussion, Representative Karsten (D., Mo.), explained that the cost of his bill to the Government would be far smaller than it appeared. He cited these facts to back up his statement:

That 103,336 Federal employes last year were required to take out surety bonds at a cost to them of $1,600,000. Only $207,000 in recoveries were paid to the Government by the insurance companies, a huge profit-maker for them. But it cost the Government, Karsten said, upward of $350,000 to administer the bond program.

His bill proposes that the Government buy a total of 20,628 different blanket bonds from private concerns through competitive bids. He estimates the cost will be about $800,000 annually. The net cost, he believes, would be about $275,000 after deductions are made for present cumbersome administrative costs and recoveries.

Karsten plans to get his bill before the House either on a suspension of the rules, or by a special rule.

The jobs pay $3100 to $6400 to start . . . Civil Service won't accept applications after July 19 for policewoman jobs on the Metropolitan police force here. Applications for firemen and policemen will be accepted for an indefinite period . . . Civil Service has put stenographer jobs back under the State quota system. So. Mountain Airplane Crash Kills 2 Pilots

Wolfsville, Md., July 10 (AP).—Two young "weekend fliers" from the Air Force Reserve in Michigan were killed early today when their plane crashed on South Mountain.

Lieut. Charles C. Richards of Detroit and Lieut. James Robert McWilliams of Farmington were on their way back to Selfridge Field, Mich., in a two-engine Beechcraft trainer. They had been out on a week-end cross-country training mission.

A National Guard ground crewman serviced the plane at Baltimore's Harbor Field last night and it took off about 11:40 p. m. (EST) for Selfridge.

Just a little more than 30 minutes later, several residents of this area heard a low flying plane and a crash, then saw a towering spurt of flames.

A call to State Police brought troopers from Hagerstown and Frederick. They sloshed across the rain-drenched mountainside, guided by the burning plane, and found the wreckage in a hollow about half way up the east side.

One pilot was pinned under a wing. The other was seven or eight feet away. The motors were 20 or 30 feet apart. The debris was strewn over an area about 100 feet square. The bodies were mangled and burned.

They were taken to Washington County hospital in Hagerstown.

The scene of the crash is about 12 miles west of Hagerstown and not far from Shanghri-la, the Catoctin Mountain camp often used by President Truman and the late President Roosevelt.

Selfridge field said the two reserve lieutenants were members of the 439th troop carrier wing.

Youth Killed By Leaping Electric Bolt

An electric charge—leaping 5 ft from a high tension line—yesterday took the life of a 20-year-old District construction worker in Fairfax County yesterday.

Collins

County police said James V. Collins of 50 I st. nw., was trying to hook the steel cable of a power crane to a "clam bucket" on a building project at the Belleview Apartments, just off Fort Hunt rd., about 2 miles south of Alexandria.

Operating the crane was the dead man's brother, Jack L. Collins, of the same address.

According to fellow workers, the boom of the crane itself was about 20 feet away from the electric wire when the accident occurred. But Collins had swung the loose cable to within about 5 feet of the overhead line. The charge bridged the gap to the cable and knocked him to the ground.

He was pronounced dead on arrival at Alexandria Hospital, where he was taken by the Penn-Daw Rescue Squad.

Fellow workmen said the two brothers were at work on the project only three days and were preparing to move the crane to another job when Collins was killed.

Alexandria City Council To Discuss Gas Stations

Alexandria City Council has scheduled a public hearing tonight at 7:30 on an ordinance which would outlaw self-service gasoline stations within the city.

The measure, subject to a final vote following the hearing, not only would ban future self-service stations but would prohibit operation of one already established on Jefferson Davis hwy. near the Arlington County line. The ordinance also includes safety provisions applicable to conventional filling stations.

Five Arrested In 2 Crimes At Same House

Five men were under arrest in Arlington last night, implicated either in the robbery last March or the attempted robbery Sunday of former gambler Blight H. Lee's Arlington home.

The arrests, made in three separate forays by Prince Georges County, Washington and Arlington police, were touched off when two men tried to rob Lee's home, 2700 S. June st., early Sunday morning.

Lee's home was invaded last March 13 by two bandits who forced his wife, Mrs. Marguerite Lee, 31, to open bedroom drawers for them, left with $160, and then called Lee later to say they had expected to find $50,000 or $60,000 in the house.

Police said the robbery attempt Sunday was thwarted when Mrs. Lee thought she recognized one of the men involved in the earlier raid.

Charged With Robbery

Charged with the attempted robbery Sunday are:

Bernard Francis Mooney, 21, of 4105 Beall ave., Landover Hills, Md.; James Wallace Smith, 25, of 5120 T st. se., Bradbury Heights, Md.; and George William Kiley, 26, of 332 Ridge rd. se.

Kiley, who police said has confessed to planning the unsuccessful Sunday robbery, also has been charged with armed robbery of the Lee home last March. Police said he implicated two others, also now under arrest:

Paul Clifton Lewis, 36, of 3718 S. 3d st., Arlington, charged with aiding and abetting the armed robbery; and his brother, Joseph G. Lewis, 29, of 1519 Park rd. nw., charged with the armed robbery in March.

Asked for Water

Police said a man they identified as Mooney knocked at the door of the Lee home early Sunday and asked Jack Lee, 15, for a drink of water and permission to use the phone.

While Mooney was still in the house, police said Mrs. Lee, who was upstairs, saw a dog chasing a man from the back of the house. Police said this was Kiley, whom Mrs. Lee had seen last March. She told her husband it was the same man. Kiley, apparently alarmed by the dog, called to Mooney to "come on out and get going."

Both men ran to a car parked nearby which police said was driven by Smith. The Lees copied down the license number of the yellow convertible as it sped away. A police lookout was posted.

Saw Car Parked

Prince Georges County police arrested the three men about 7 p. m. Sunday when they saw the car parked at a house in Suitland, Md., and turned them over to Arlington authorities.

Arrest of the Lewis brothers came yesterday after Kiley talked to Arlington police. Joseph Lewis was arrested by Washington police at 15th and G sts. nw., and Arlington police arrested Paul Lewis.

The case of Mooney, Kiley and Smith was continued in Arlington Court to July 13 and bond set at $5000 each after they waived preliminary hearing yesterday. Case of the Lewis brothers comes up in County Court today.

Kiley and Joseph Lewis are charged with theft of only $86 from the Lee home, although first reports said $160 in cash was taken in the March robbery.

Pedestrian, 76, Traffic Victim; 3 Die in Area

District Traffic Toll
1950 deaths to date 36
1949 deaths to date 34
Total 1949 death toll 71

A 76-year-old District man yesterday became Washington's 36th traffic victim this year when he died at Casualty Hospital at 2:25 a. m. of injuries suffered late Sunday night.

Earlier, two Maryland residents and a soldier stationed at Fort Belvoir, Va., were killed and four other persons injured in area traffic accidents late Sunday.

The dead:

William H. Stewart, of 722 Half st. sw.

Leo Adolph Decker, 47, Baltimore police private.

Mrs. Margaret Vann Buck, 60, also of Baltimore.

S/Sergt. Harry Alexander Rector, 22, Fort Belvoir, Va.

Stewart was struck at about 10 p. m. Sunday at the intersection of S. Capitol and F. sts. Police said that he ran across the street and into the path of a car operated by Helen S. Orth, 51, of 313 Livingston ter. se., a special duty nurse at Garfield Hospital. Police said no charges were placed against Miss Orth except a technical "hold for the coroner" charge.

The Baltimore residents were killed in a car-truck accident on Route 301, eight miles south of Upper Marlboro, Md. Police said that Decker was operator of the car in which Mrs. Buck, his wife, Mrs. Ruth Decker, 40 and their two children, Henry, 11 and Lucille, 7, were passengers.

They said Decker ran into the rear end of a tractor-trailer truck at about 10 p. m. Decker was instantly killed. Mrs Buck died at 2:25 a. m. at Casualty Hospital. In critical condition at the hospital is Mrs. Decker, with head injuries. Henry is in serious condition at Casualty while Lucille escaped injury.

Police identified the driver of the truck as Carl P. Bolan, 33, of Jacksonville Beach, Florida. No charges have been placed in the case.

Sgt. Rector was injured near Winchester, Va., Sunday night when the car in which he and three other soldiers were riding skidded on a wet highway and struck a bridge abutment on Virginia route 522 about eight miles northwest of Winchester.

He died in Winchester Memorial Hospital yesterday. Treated at the hospital and released were George H. Ixon, 17, of Fort Belvoir, and Donald Smith, 20, of Fort Myer, Va.

On 2 Charges

Aaron Perry Is Held for Grand Jury

Aaron Perry, 25, former District of Columbia middleweight boxing champion, and a 23-year-old companion must face a District grand jury on charges of robbery and housebreaking.

Perry

Perry, of 1635 Gales st. ne., who said he is now a counterman, and Charles Turner, 23, of 2244 12th pl. nw., a laborer, waived arraignment before Municipal Court Judge Walter J. Casey yesterday on charges they entered the apartment of Maurice K. Lewis, 4805 Georgia ave. nw., on July 2 and took $30 and a wrist watch. They were held on $10,000 bond each.

The pair was arrested early Sunday morning near the Chevy Chase Country Club, after a 50-mile-an-hour chase by Montgomery County policeman Arthur R. Bradshaw.

Police said a search of their car revealed a pistol in the glove compartment, two money bags which had been slit to be used as masks, and a pair of rubber gloves.

Police said that both Perry and Turner had confessed to the raid on the Lewis apartment. At that time, Lewis, his wife Edith, and their son Mark, were threatened by two men who ordered them into the bathroom and ransacked their second-floor apartment before leaving by a kitchen door.

8 Overpower Guard, Flee Va. Jail Camp

Roanoke, Va., July 10 (AP).—Eight convicts overpowered a guard this morning and escaped from Camp 31 at Chapel in Giles County.

After assaulting the guard shortly after 11 a. m., the men took his 12-gauge shotgun and .38 calibre pistol, State police reported. They were said to have stolen a 1949 automobile and were believed to have crossed into West Virginia at Bluefield.

Among the escapees was Joe L. Costner, 21, who was serving a 10-year term for armed robbery at Fairfax.

Ruling Lets Judges Free Mental Cases

The United States Court of Appeals yesterday reversed itself and ruled that a trial judge has power to release a hospitalized mental patient after habeas corpus proceedings without participation of the Commission on Mental Health.

All nine judges of the Appelate Court affirmed the release from St. Elizabeths Hospital of D. Farson Boddie, 33, of the Wardman Park Hotel, as ordered by District Court Judge T. Alan Goldsborough last October.

In so doing, the judges reversed three previous Court of Appeals rulings here in which they held that when a mental patient seeks freedom on a writ of habeas corpus, the trial judge can do no more than: "Order the original lunacy inquiry reopened for a new trial with the Commission on Mental Health participating."

They pointed out in their opinion that the Congressional Act establishing the Commission on Mental Health is "silent" on the right of a confined patient to assert he has regained sanity and to ask for his release.

"Such silence recognizes the remedy of habeas corpus. The Code provisions do not require the participation of the Commission in a hearing on an application for the writ by a confined patient," the opinion declares.

The judges said they thought the omissions were hardly inadvertent, but were indicative of a Congressional intent to avoid interference with established procedure in habeas corpus cases.

Referring to the habeas corpus writ as "great and treasured," the judges said they were convinced that Congress had omitted "with conscious and deliberate care" a requirement that the Commission participate in habeas corpus cases.

This was done "in order to avoid even the appearance of impairing the traditional judicial power," they declared.

It was made clear that their ruling does not preclude a trial judge's requesting assistance from the Commission when he considers such cases, if he desires.

They also noted the "commendable candor" of the Government, which initiated the appeal, on the grounds that Judge Goldsborough should have referred the case to the Commission, but sided with Attorney P. Bateman Ennis, who represented Boddie.

Appeal Court Amends Rule On Murder Case Threats

Griffin to Get New Trial After Awaiting Chair For Three Years

A new trial for Baxter Griffin, 44, convicted murderer awaiting execution since March, 1947, was ordered yesterday by the United States Court of Appeals.

In ordering the new trial, Judges Henry W. Edgerton and James M. Proctor at the same time ruled that uncommunicated threats against the defendant by the deceased must now be admitted as evidence by a trial court.

Strongly dissenting in the opinion was Judge Bennett Champ Clark, who declared, "I wholly disagree with the opinion agreed upon by my two distinguished colleagues."

The present opinion extends the doctrine of uncommunicated threats without limitation to a degree "never heretofore dreamed of in any court or any other jurisdiction," he declared.

Card Game Argument

Baxter was convicted of first-degree murder in the fatal shooting of Lee Hunter, 23, in an argument during a card game at Hunter's home at 1718 9th. nw. on February 5, 1947.

He pleaded self-defense at his trial, claiming that Hunter came at him threateningly first. But several eye-witnesses testified that Griffin was the aggressor and that Hunter made no move.

It was not until after his trial and conviction that defense attorneys learned an open pocket-knife had been found in the pocket of the slain man. Charging that the United States Attorney's office had deliberately suppressed this fact during the trial, they appealed the case.

The case went twice to the Supreme Court, which refused to review it at first but later returned it to the United States Court of Appeals with instructions that it rule on the admissability of uncommunicated threats.

Judges Edgerton and Proctor decided it would be "logical and humane" to admit such evidence.

"It is of course true that the apparent conduct of the deceased at the time of the homicide, rather than any concealed plan he may have had, bears directly on the question whether the accused acted in self-defense, but evidence that the deceased had a concealed plan of attack bears on the question what his apparent conduct was," they said.

Must Be Admitted

Therefore, the court decided, the prevailing rule in District Court should be that when a defendant claims self-defense and there is evidence of it, although only through his own testimony, the uncommunicated threats of the deceased must be admitted as evidence.

The judges asserted their confidence in the good faith of the prosecution, although it did not introduce the known evidence of the open pocket-knife.

"However, the case emphasizes the necessity of disclosure by the prosecution of evidence that may reasonably be considered admissible and useful to the defense.

"The interest of the United States Attorney's office in a criminal prosecution is not that it shall win the case, but that justice shall be done," Judges Edgerton and Proctor said.

Judge Clark declared the majority opinion will send the case "back to its original starting point to start out on its weary way again.

"It is probable that Griffin will die of the infirmities of old age before he can be brought to pay the penalty which he richly deserves," declared Judge Clark.

In conclusion, Judge Clark stated:

"So far as I am concerned, so long as I remain on the bench I will decline to follow this case as a precedent and in any similar case will devote my best efforts to overruling it."

Briton Visits Gun Factory To Check on Noted Ancestor

Mrs. Eva Tingey Shell of London, England, visited the Naval Gun Factory here yesterday, and just about everybody turned out to greet her.

Mrs. Shell

Everybody, that is, but the ghost of her illustrious ancestor, one Capt. Thomas Tingey.

Mrs. Shell is an attractive, middle-aged woman who just arrived from London. She's in this country to visit friends—and to catch up on the history of her ancestor.

The captain is justly famed in United States Navy circles as a convivial gentleman, a robust singer, and as the first commandant of the Navy Yard (now Gun Factory), from its beginning in 1800 until his death in 1829.

The sober Navy publication, "Round-shot to Rockets," has this to say about the subsequent activities of the Navy Yard's first CO:

"Legend has it that for many years Tingey's ghost was frequently seen at the windows of the commandant's quarters wearing a cocked hat and sword over a long flannel nightshirt and carrying a long brass spyglass under his arm."

But in 1945, when the Navy Yard was officially named the Naval Gun Factory, Captain Tingey's ghost "vanished with a cry that was heard for miles around."

How Mrs. Shell became interested in Captain Tingey is a story in itself. In 1914, when she worked in Philadelphia as a newspaperwoman, a spiritualist told her "he saw me connected with a naval man with lots of gold braid on his arm. That's what started me on Captain Tingey."

A British uncle of hers traced Tingey's life from a youth in the British navy until he married a Philadelphia girl in the 1770's, left the British and joined the U. S. Navy in 1798.

AB&W Losing $488 Daily, Official Tells ICC Hearing

The Alexandria, Barcroft & Washington Transit Co. has been losing $488 a day since June 4 despite an intrastate fare increase effective on that date, Beverly C. May, general manager, testified yesterday.

His statement came at the opening of an Interstate Commerce Commission hearing on the company's request for a 5-cent fare increase on its interstate trips between the District and nearby Virginia points.

May blamed a drop in the number of passengers, which he said began in March last year, on greater use of automobiles and on suburban shopping centers.

The decrease has come principally in non-rush-hour passengers, he said, and probably shows that many shoppers who formerly rode buses to Washington from the Virginia suburbs are now driving in, or are patronizing suburban shopping centers.

George R. Snyder, company auditor for 26 years, said the number of passengers declined 14.72 percent, and operating revenues 14.27 percent, from the first quarter of last year to the same period this year.

Malcolm D. Miller, counsel for the Arlington County Board and several Arlington civic groups opposing the increase, drew testimony from May that the bus company pays its president, R. L. May, $25,000 a year for rental of the garage at Four Mile Run, which the senior May owns.

Present interstate fares are 15 cents cash, or 12½ cents in tokens within shorter designated zones.

The hearing, before ICC Examiner H. C. Lawton, will be resumed at 9:30 a. m. today, with R. T. Mitchell, vice president and assistant manager, expected to take the stand. Miller said he would put on witnesses to testify against the increase.

Worker Burned As Silver Hill Garage is Razed

A 38-year-old maintenance worker was severely burned and son slightly injured during a $6000 fire last night which destroyed a garage and equipment belonging to the Silver Hill Sand & Gravel Co., in Silver Hill, Md.

The fire, believed to have originated in the oil pit of the garage when an electric light bulb exploded, leveled the building despite the efforts of eight nearby fire companies.

Albert F. Kirk, of Millersville, Md., who was burned on the chest, face and arms, was treated at Casualty Hospital. His son, Robert, 19, was cut on the left hand.

Sesqui Postpones 'Freedom Cavalcade'

The Sesquicentennial Commission has indefinitely postponed its September 16 "Cavalcade of Freedom," it was learned last night.

Sesqui planners had billed the event—to commemorate the anniversary of the laying of the cornerstone at the Capital—as featuring a mammoth parade of bands, marching units and elaborate floats depicting great events in America history.

After abandonment of the Freedom Fair exposition, officials talked up the Cavalcade affair as the major special events effort of the Sesqui year.

This latest foldup leaves the August 4 opening of the "Faith of Our Fathers" drama in the Rock Creek Park amphitheater the only remaining big venture on the Sesqui program.

Several minor events, some annual shows but under the Sesqui banner, are still scheduled.

Paul Massman, Sesqui general manager, said the September float and baby industry exposition was called off because of insufficient time to plan it and present "unsettled" conditions in industry as result of the Korean crisis.

Though all planning was in preliminary stages, it was estimated the event might cost the Sesqui anywhere from $15,000 to $50,000.

On the Sesqui musical calendar, August 2 and 3 are big days. A special Sesqui symphony orchestra (the National Symphony augmented by four brass bands) and the Sesqui chorus will do the "Berlioz Requiem" in honor of the birthday of Pierre L'Enfant, artist and engineer who planned the Capital. It will be held at the Watergate.

Yesterday Sesqui budget officials were taking stock of the July Fourth fireworks show the commission sponsored this year. Preliminary figures showed gate receipts at $4313 with expenses about $9000, or about a $4600 loss to the Sesqui.

Solicitation will begin early in October, with the first general report luncheon scheduled for October 17 at Hotel Washington.

U. S. Marine Band To Mark Birthday Without Any Fuss

The U. S. Marine Band, the nation's oldest military band and "The President's Own," will celebrate its 152d birthday today without even an extra bugle blast.

Maj. William F. Santelmann, band leader, said the next major celebration of the unit's birthday will be in 1973—when it is 175 years old. The band is so advanced in age now, he said, that its birthday celebrations are spaced out at quarter century intervals.

The band was founded by President John Adams on July 11, 1798, and moved to Washington in 1800. It has played for every inaugural parade since. It made its first White House appearance at the 1801 New Year's reception.

Wearley's, Noted Downtown Restaurant, Soon Will Move

The Washington Post

Wearley's Restaurant, Downtown Landmark, to Be Razed

Wearley's Restaurant, 418 12th st. nw., a Washington steak and seafood house for more than 50 years, will move at the end of the month to provide larger parking facilities for the Washington Garage, 1212 E st. nw.

Morris Rubenstein, owner of Wearley's, said he has applied for a transfer of Wearley's liquor license to the States Restaurant, 516 N. Capitol st. Rubenstein said he intends to maintain the Wearley name at the new location.

The property on which the Wearley Restaurant building is located is owned by the estate of Christian Heurich. The estate leases the site to H. A. Swagart, who also holds the lease on the garage.

Wearley's has been a downtown Washington restaurant since 1898, when it was opened by the late Oscar B. Wearley. Its first site was on land now occupied by the Raleigh Hotel, Rubenstein said.

It then moved to 418 12th st., displacing a restaurant known as Wallis', which later went out of business.

Rubenstein, who lives at 1411 Decatur st. nw., bought the restaurant in 1937.

The restaurant, said Rubenstein has played host to such figures as the late Mayor LaGuardia of New York, Fritz Kreisler, Hans Kindler Al Smith, Al Jolson and Arthur Godfrey.

Falls Church Sewer Work Faces Delay

Falls Church will have to wait until 1951 for any major improvements to its storm sewer system.

This was the stern answer given last night to about 45 city residents who turned out at a meeting of the Falls Church City Council to ask for immediate action on the drainage problem.

Mayor Albert M. Orme told the residents the city has just about used up its bonding power, but that with a new assessment base coming up in January, 1951, it will have expanded bonding power to meet its civic needs.

John P. Scott, jr., of 516 Timber lane, who said he represented the largest delegation present at the meeting, told councilmen:

"You are talking about reassessment of property on Timber lane. There will be no property on Timber lane by 1951."

Scott said that in a recent storm a little girl had been washed 60 or 70 feet along a gutter before she had been rescued. "I'm just afraid the children are going to get drowned," Scott said, and told the council they should "buy them life preservers."

Orme told the citizens that the schools are Falls Church's most important consideration at present. He said the city's borrowing power picture will change next year when the basis of assessment is changed from 20 percent of true value to 45 percent of true value.

Councilman Lee M. Rhoads said the city's present debt limit is $1,070,000, and that it will be increased by more than 50 percent with the reassessment. He said that the current city budget would allow only "stop gap measures in critical areas" on storm drainage correction this year, unless the city can "think up new sources of revenue."

In another action, the City Council referred to City Attorney LaRue Van Meter for study and report, a newly developed controversy with Fairfax County over dual sewer billing.

About 100 residents in the Walnut Hills, Timber Lane and Poplar Heights subdivisions—who have usually paid Falls Church sewer bills—have recently also received bills from Fairfax County.

Census Shows D. C. Definitely 9th on List

By Chalmers M. Roberts
Post Reporter

Washington is the Nation's ninth largest city, two places higher than in 1940, the latest Census figures assure.

With only Philadelphia and Houston missing from the list of 1950 preliminary census figures for the biggest communities, these are the country's 15 ranking cities:

New York, Chicago, Philadelphia (estimated as almost certainly still third), Los Angeles, Detroit, Baltimore, Cleveland, St. Louis, Washington, Boston, San Francisco, Pittsburgh, Milwaukee, Buffalo and New Orleans.

Latest report was for Pittsburgh, which showed only a minor gain and thus dropped behind Washington, as did Boston. But Houston's total may bring it within the first 15, a big jump from its twenty-first place standing in 1940. If so, it will displace New Orleans as the South's biggest city.

The nearly complete list of all cities in the United States with 100,000 or more population shows 104 cities in that class, 12 more than a decade ago. Only one in the 1940 list—Lowell, Mass.—dropped below 100,000 in 1950. It is possible a few more cities may be added to the 100,000-or-more list.

Biggest gains, as had been predicted, have come in cities in the West, Mountain States, the South and the Southwest. Here are the biggest gainers, percentage wise:

Fifty percent or more gain: Baton Rouge, La., 257.0 percent; Corpus Christi, Tex., 88.6 percent; Mobile, Ala., 61.3 percent; Phoenix., Ariz., 60.5 percent; San Diego, Calif., 58.1 percent; Fort Worth, Tex., 55.9 percent; Austin, Tex., 50.1 percent.

Twenty-five to 50 percent gain: Long Beach, Calif., 48.5 percent; Dallas, Tex., 46.8 percent; Miami, Fla., 43.6 percent; Memphis, Tenn., 34.5 percent; Spokane, Wash., 31.5 percent; Tacoma, Wash., 30.7 percent; Los Angeles, 29.9 percent; Denver, Colo., 28.0 percent; Tulsa, Okla., 27.0 percent; Sacramento, 26.8 percent; Norfolk, Va., 26.4 percent; Seattle, Wash., 25.7 percent.

Cities showing decrease for the decade are: Lowell, Mass., 20.7 percent; Scranton, Pa., 11.2 percent; Fall River, Mass., 2.9 percent; Wilmington, Del., 2.3 percent; New Bedford, Mass., 1.2 percent; Reading, Pa., 1.5 percent; Jersey City, N. J., .3 percent; Paterson, N. J., .2 percent; Youngstown, O., .1 percent.

In the following table, cities are listed according to their 1940 rank. Shown are 1940 population, the preliminary 1950 census total and the percentage gain or loss in the decade. Cities registering losses are marked by an asterisk in the percentage column.

Postlude

Canadian Soprano Is Impressive

By Paul Hume

The weather was unkind to "North American Night" at the Watergate last night.

With a guest soprano from Toronto, and a conductor from Los Angeles, the skies threatened constantly during the program. From time to time, drops of rain fell over the small but determined audience—a few drops at a time—never enough to stop the show, but enough to wet the listeners.

On the stage things were undampened, although the string players in the orchestra might deny that statement, too. Alfred Wallenstein was guest conductor. His program included the first symphony of Brahms, Morton Gould's "American Salute," and short pieces by Mendelssohn, Dukas, and Wagner.

Lois Marshall was Canada's emissary to the Sesquicentennial concerts. She has recently won top honors in her country, and judging by her singing, is on her way to win them in the United States as well.

Shows Wide Range

She sang Agathe's big aria from Weber's Freischutz, and songs by Handel, Barber and Michael Head. Her encore was Mozart's Alleluia. Miss Marshall owns a large and rather darkly colored soprano of wide range. It is well controlled, and moves in rapid passages with admirable ease and clarity.

She phrased the famous Weber lines with proper spaciousness and tenderness. The final pages might be given with a bit more exhilaration, but were easily encompassed in the grand manner.

Her Handel was admirable, but the poetry of Samuel Barber's song was lost in the outdoor spaces.

Wallenstein is an assured technician with orchestra. He took the Brahms symphony with more leisure than we recall hearing it in years. The slow movement was more "adagio" than "non troppo," and the finale seemed endless, but the sticky night may have slowed the visitor down.

No Night for "Snap"

The orchestra played reasonably well for Wallenstein, but it was not much of a night for precision or snap. Short rehearsals and damp weather don't conspire for good symphony playing.

Adventists Open World Conference

San Francisco, July 30 (Spl.).—Thoughts of war were uppermost in the mnds of Seventh Day Adventists, who refuse to participate in combat because they are against killing, at the opening of the denomination's quadrennial world general conference here today.

Elder J. LaMar McElhany, of Takoma Park, Md., retiring world president of the General Conference, in a message tonight urged the nearly 900 delegates "not to allow the truths of God to become casualties of war."

Elder McElhany recalled that during World War II "some of our fellow believers yielded their lives as martyrs," referring to deaths in other countries where efforts were made to send Adventists into combat and added, "others have been tortured, imprisoned or persecuted."

Elder McElhany flew here from a hospital in Southern California to be present when his message was read by A. W. Cormack, associate secretary, of Takoma Park.

Preparedness Talk

Earier in the day a special committee discussed recommendations by the church's War Service Commission dealing with preparedness.

The commission recommended that the church establish schools, as it did during World War II, to teach young men military medical duties. It urged the church to authorize a two-week medical cadet officers training camp to train a group capable of teaching other young Adventists the technique of combat first aid and medicine. Such a course has been approved by the education and training division of the Army's Surgeon General's department.

A spokesman for the 716,000 members from 69 countries said that the training camp would be held August 14-28 at Camp Beulah, Pueblo, Colo.

The conference during its 12-day meeting will hear reports on 3500 schools, 162 medical institutions, 52 publishing enterprises and missionary operations in 288 areas. It is meeting in the Civic Auditorium, on the second floor of which a network of department booths indicated the wide variety of activities sponsored throughout the world.

Devotional Service

Tuesday morning, Elder Albert V. Olson, vice president, of Takoma Park, will lead a devotional, and Ernest D. Dick, secretary, of Takoma Park, will make his report to the business session. Treasurer William E. Nelson, also of Takoma Park, will make his report Tuesday.

Governor Earl Warren is expected to fly here Tuesday from Santa Monica to address the meeting.

More than 15,000 Adventists are expected to attend the principal meetings Saturday, and leaders plan to hold simultaneous sessions in the Fox Theater, one of the largest in San Francisco, and in the War Memorial Opera House where the United Nations was born a little more than five years ago.

'This Hurts Me More . . .'

By Tom Kelley—The Washington Post

On the other end of the shot yesterday at the Upshur Street Hospital, one of 12 vaccination centers in the District, is Dr. E. Edgar Ruebush. The District's annual antirabies drive, which opened yesterday, runs until August 4. Shots are free and are given Mondays, Wednesdays and Fridays, except for rain, from 4 to 6 p. m.

Civil Defense Chief Named At Greenbelt

The Greenbelt, Md. City Council last night recalled its World War II chief of civilian defense to active duty.

Panagoulis

George Panagoulis, the chief of public safety, was appointed to the post. Councilman Francis J. Lastner, who instituted the move, said "Although there is no need for hysteria at this time, we should follow the example of other communities and be prepared."

In its monthly meeting, the council also passed the first reading of an ordinance which would permit traffic violators of Greenbelt to pay their fines in the city, without court charges, now placed in Hyattsville.

Councilman Lastner also told the council that he had received word from the State Road Commission that Edmonston rd. will be widened to 24 feet within the next construction year.

Air Force Orders 2 Bomber Groups, Jets to England

The Air Force last night ordered two additional bomber groups of the Strategic Air Command and a jet fighter group to England.

While this strengthening of the American Air Forces in Europe was called a "routine rotation" to aid in training air forces of the North Atlantic Treaty powers, much significance was seen in the action in the light of the present world situation.

There already is a B-29 group in England, and this shift of the Ninety-third Group from Castle Air Base, Calif., and the Ninety-seventh Group from Biggs Air Base, Tex., to England—both B-50 units—will put strong strategic bomber forces within reach of Russia. The fighter group being moved is the Twentieth, from Shaw Air Force Base, S. C. It has 75 Republic F-84D jet fighter-bombers.

Comic Books 'Plugging' Stars May Lose Mail Privileges

Two-fisted comic book heroes, normally equal to any emergency, are facing a real hazard: the United States Postoffice Department.

The heroes will have to stop plugging their radio, movie, TV, and real-life counterparts, or publishers will lose second-class mailing privileges, a department official said yesterday.

This is the issue: are comic books such as "Mr. District Attorney," "Bob Hope," or "Howdy Doody" really editorial, or do they simply promote their heroes in other fields?

If the Postoffice Department finds them simply advertising matter, then out goes the second-class privilege. The books then must be mailed at the third-class or parcel post rate.

The situation is anything but comical to publishers of the well-thumbed magazines, who sell an estimated 55 million copies monthly.

One publisher, whose monthly circulation is 17 million, though it would cost $800 more each month to distribute one comic magazine, alone, at higher postal rates.

The Postoffice Department said the cost would be "four or five times as great."

In the past six months, more than 50 comic books had been submitted for second-class mailing to the Postoffice. Many were rejected, a few approved, and some are still being studied, he said.

During its scrutiny, the department looks over contracts comic book publishers make with the "big names" they feature. One such contract, the spokesman said, required one page of each magazine be devoted to plugging the hero's current movie.

"That's pretty obvious advertising," a department official said.

Jeep Bounces Out of (S)corn Into High Cotton as Real Car

The ubiquitous jeep is a passenger car, not a freight vehicle. Five judges of the United States Court of Claims yesterday reached that solemn decision.

But in a not-so-solemn decision for the court, Chief Judge Marvin Jones spun another of his humorous opinions. He began by saying:

"The jeep, having been everywhere else, is now in court."

The jeep was in court because the Union Pacific Railroad has been trying to collect some $2,627.95 for shipping jeeps. The Government paid for a shipment at freight, not passenger, vehicle rates, and the railroad went to court.

Judge Jones said the issue "is not an easy one," but he concluded the vehicle really is for passengers. He recounted the jeep's origin and history, and then went on:

"The jeep was ubiquitous. Wherever anyone went the jeep was there. It frequently aggravated, but made itself indispensable. The name of the jeep is shrouded in mystery and involved in dispute. It is most generally thought to have been nicknamed by some soldier after a character in the comic strip, 'Popeye.' At any rate, it became the darling of the whole Army."

The judge admitted there was lots of testimony that the jeep carried all sorts of freight. But he philosophized:

"I have seen my father haul everything from plowshares to a crosscut saw in a buggy, but that hardly made the buggy a freight vehicle."

Judge Jones threw in another story about his boyhood. The judge, a former Congressman, said that as a lad he once substituted a calf for a pony because calves were more plentiful.

"We called him our little pony. But somehow nature had intended him for other purposes, and we finally gave up. We almost shed tears when they slaughtered him for beef."

It may be difficult, said the judge, to classify the jeep. But it must be done. "We find that the wartime jeep was primarily a passenger car."

Next case.

D. C. Area Florists Elected by Association

Two Washington area florists were elected officers of the Middle Atlantic Florists Association yesterday in Roanoke, Va., the Associated Press reported.

They were Detlef J. Witt, of Silver Hill, named vice president, and R. Lloyd Jenkins of Suitland, former president, reelected regional director. Walter E. Mosmiller, jr., of Richmond, was made president.

Four hundred florists from Delaware, Maryland, the District, Virginia and West Virginia are attending the 11th annual convention.

Reiner Plans Stamp Talk

Ignatz Reiner, vice president of the Society of Philatelic Americans, will speak on his stamp collection at a meeting of the Collectors Club, Branch 5, S. P. A., to be held at 8 tonight at Pythian Temple, 1012 9th st. nw.

Girl, 5, Injured In 16-Foot Fall

A 5-year-old Alexandria girl was seriously injured yesterday when she fell from the second story of a partially-completed house on the 600 block of S. View ter.

Carol Lee Keitch, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Harold Keitch, 2400 King st., was admitted to Alexandria Hospital for treatment of shock and possible internal injuries. Hospital authorities last night reported her condition as "satisfactory."

Alexandria police said the little girl was playing in the building with her 4-year-old brother, Harold, when she toppled backward from an open window to the ground about 16 feet below.

Fall Styles Designed To Make Us Happy

By Peggy Preston

NEW YORK, N. Y., July 10.—You'll have to see these clothes to really understand about them—the beautiful, elegant designers' pieces that are setting the pace for American fashion in the fall of 1950.

For it is a story best told in the richness of color, in the surprise feel of a fabric, in the subtle cut of a collar, sleeve or belt. It is, in fact, one of the most delightful fashion tales the stylists have managed to spin in many a year.

Perhaps it is because the clothes are so essentially feminine that they find favor in the eyes of fashion editors assembled here for the annual press week of the New York Dress Institute's Couture Group. In the past five years we've watched the silhouette subjected to a series of drastic, sometimes irritating, changes. After a violent dose of the "new look," it was suddenly pared down in a manner reminiscent of the 1920s.

But, this fall, we're pleased to report, the bad features of both periods have disappeared. We have, instead, a softly rounded silhouette from top to toe, enhanced again and again with the modern miracles of fabric construction and color tinting.

Clothes to Make A Woman Happy

THESE are, indeed, clothes to make a woman happy, to help her forget her troubles. It could be that is what they were intended to do.

For a note of sobriety was struck in the opening session at the Waldorf-Astoria this morning, when a reporter inquired if the developments in Korea would affect the production and design of this year's clothes. Eleanor Lambert, press director of the institute, pointed out there was little likelihood. These collections were prepared at least one month ago and are already in production.

Then she added, "However, designers, like artists, have a sixth sense. They must know how to interpret the times and the national mood, six months in advance. These clothes, feminine and colorful, may be the kind we will need to help us in troubled times."

Spain Inspired Designer's Collection

TODAY'S series of showings got off to a brilliant start with the Spanish-inspired collection of the whimsical Tina Leser. Color was rampant in the group of casual and evening costumes that carried the romantic stamp of ancient Spain.

Other showings of the day included the handsome suits and coats of Monte Sano & Pruzan; shoes by Delman, Inc., dresses by Anthony Blotta and Pattullo-Jo Copeland. At night, Maurice Rentner showed his collection on a penthouse terrace. During the supper hour Elizabeth Arden's custom-made gowns were on display at the hat establishment of Mr. John.

Surprise event of the day was a late afternoon reception given for editors by Mayor and Mrs. O'Dwyer at the beautiful Gracie Mansion, high on a bluff overlooking the East River.

New York Dress Institute Photos

SHAGGY dog jokes should thrive this winter, thanks to new fabrics being introduced by high fashion designers for use in women's coats. These heavy loop-piled woolens are said to be inspired by the curly coat of the French poodle. Designer Monte Sano used just such a fabric for three-quarter length coat (above, left) modeled yesterday at the New York Institute. Note the sleeve fullness starting well below the shoulder line and the uneven hemline. In the center photo, Maurice Rentner's new "profile silhouette" is demonstrated. Stiff satin juts out of a pencil silhouette to make the profile effect. A tangy foreign flavor characterizes Designer Tina Leser's new fall collection, also previewed yesterday. This evening ensemble (at right) reflects the Spanish influence which marks her new designs

Here's the Style Trend in Brief

THIS, in brief, is how the fashion picture shapes up for fall and winter:

Natural shoulder lines, with great interest in high flared collars, deep dolman sleeves and "fill-in" necklines.

Nipped-in, natural waistline, accentuated with elaborate belts.

Flared Peplum, peg-top pockets, or drapes over upper hipline.

Slim skirts prominent, but the fullness is often hidden in back pleats, gores, over-drapes, etc.

Hemlines at midcalf, about 14 inches from the floor for daytime and many evening dresses. In other evening versions, the hemline is uneven, street length in front, spreading down and out in back.

A noticeable absence of navy blue, the favorite basic color being black once again. Another popular basic—banker's gray, a dark charcoal.

Velvet's the fabric of the season, used in both casual and formal wear. Gray flannel is another pace setter, combined frequently with satin. Others to consider: jersies, waferweight plaids, stiff taffeta.

Your Baby and Mine

Constant Care for Child Need Not Make One Dull

By Myrtle Meyer Eldred

THE MIND deteriorates when the work being done is boresome and monotonous. To keep the mind alert there should be active problems to be solved as well as competition and conflict.

Here is a mother tied to a child whose mind has never developed. She writes, "Do you have any solution for the mother of a darling child, who, despite her looks, is blind, invalid and subject to epileptic attacks? She is 10 years old and has the mentality of a 9-month-old baby.

"My husband deserted me when he found out about the child, and I live with my parents both of whom work. I do the housework and it has become such a routine that it is beginning to show on me.

Friends Lacking

"I AM 30 years old but I have few if any friends as I have to be with the child constantly, no one wanting to be responsible for her. I used to be active and traveled a lot. I won't give up the baby, regardless, but the days seem to have no end. Is there anything I could do that would help me pass the time?"

You have shut the door on the one possible solution which is to try to have the child committed to an institution. With such a mentality she would be happy with any considerate attendant, and while you salve your own conscience when you devote your life to her, she is incapable of knowing or even appreciating such devotion.

Here are a few suggestions that come to mind. You might get the names of other mothers with like problems from your State Society for Crippled Children and Adults, Inc. Just insert the name of your own State in front of that title and address it to your own capital city.

Perhaps a correspondence with these mothers might help all of you to adopt better methods of caring for your handicapped children.

Handwork Suggested

IF you could sell handwork, crocheted, knitted or embroidered, your time would be occupied more profitably. Or you might develop your capacity to make delicious pies, cakes, home-made candy or hot breads which would present stimulating problems of manufacture and bring you into contact with the public.

Volunteers Aid Annual Bazaar For Hospital

Some 200 persons are serving on committees assisting in preparations for the Montgomery County General Hospital annual benefit on July 26.

Since the Women's Board, which is sponsoring the event, is limited to 100 members, the number of volunteer workers is indicative of the general interest in the benefit. The affair will take place on the lawn of the Sherwood High School in Sandy Spring.

All proceeds from the bazaar and supper will be used for hospital needs. Last December a new wing was opened, including a maternity department, toward which the Women's Board has contributed $20,000.

Additional committee workers announced yesterday include:

Mrs. Thomas Landson, Mrs. William John Thomas, Mrs. Charles W. Williams, Mrs. Louis Gravelle, Mrs. Stanley Stabler, Mrs. A. Douglas Farquhar, Mrs. Robert Miller and Mrs. Reginald Conley.

Also, Frederick L. Gilpin, Donald R. Hobbs, C. Willard Harvey, Douglas Riggs, R. B. Thomas, jr., Stanley Stabler and Spencer Brown, jr.

Also, J. J. Hutton, jr., Kenneth Hobbs, Henry T. Clark, jr., Lewel Abbott, Osborne Stabler, Louis Lethridge, Elbert Richardson, James W. Barnsley, Robert Chichester, William H. Gilpin, Roy Davis, Jack Bentley, Stanley Moore and R. Rowland Stabler.

'Though All That Glitters Isn't Gold, A Novice Can Gild Simply With Bronze Powder and Banana Oil

DEAR ANNE:

I have a fine pair of eighteenth century wall sconces—gilt on plaster—which have been damaged. Some of the plaster will have to be replaced, which of course will entail regilding in part. Will you tell me if there is any method of doing this which the amateur can do? The article in the Encyclopedia Britannica is enough to frighten anyone away!

Levin Houston, Fredericksburg, Va.

I took a look at that article and you're certainly right! It's very comprehensive and technical, covering the subject thoroughly. However, the common or garden variety of gilding, as practiced in the American home, can consist simply in applying a little bronze powder and banana oil. These are sold in combination for this purpose by most paint shops. They do not give the fine, solid gold effect of gold leaf, but do make a very nice gilded surface.

If it's gold leaf you wish to do, this is a bit more complicated It takes considerable skill to apply it successfully. The materials are readily available, however, being sold by a local art shop (telephone, National 6386.) They consist of gold size, a sort of sticky varnish and real or synthetic gold leaf. (The latter is also called Dutch metal.) The size is brushed on and allowed to dry for 24 hours, then the thin leaf is applied to the "tacky" surface. The synthetic leaf is easier to handle than the real, as it is not so thin. Amateurs have used it successfully after a bit of practice. If the sconces are valuable and you feel you would like a professional gold leaf job done on them, you can contact one firm doing this work by telephoning Adams 5795.

DEAR ANNE:

Could you please print the recipe for diced chicken and almonds?

M. A. H.

Is "Chicken Almond" what you have in mind? Here is a recipe for it that is a favorite with Mrs. Fred M. Vinson, wife of the Chief Justice of the Supreme Court.

CHICKEN ALMOND

Clean and cut up a very fat stewing chicken weighing 4 or 5 pounds. Cook until tender in 3½ quarts water to which has been added 1 onion, 1 stalk celery, salt and pepper. Remove meat from bone and cut into small pieces as for salad.

There should be about 2 quarts broth left. Use half of it to cook one package egg noodles until tender, adding salt and pepper. Use remainder of broth to make a thick, rich sauce, using about 4 heaping tablespoons flour, salt and pepper to taste, and 5 tablespoons sherry Alternate layers of chicken and noodles in glass baking dish or casserole, pouring sauce over and through it. Top with chopped almonds and put in oven to get hot before serving. This recipe serves eight.

DEAR ANNE:

Your mention of Osnaberg in a recent column made me wonder if perhaps you would like some additional information to pass on.

A mill manufacturing Osnaberg—Scottdale Mills, Scottdale, Ga.—is very obliging about sending samples from which material can be ordered direct. They also have many other interesting and inexpensive curtain and drapery fabrics—the loveliest colors imaginable in Monk's Cloth.

An ambitious and talented woman of my acquaintance in another city made Osnaberg drapes for her home hand-embroidered in the Indian Tree of Life pattern. Lovely and fabulous, if one has that much time on one's hands!

Margaret F. Williams,
Falls Church, Va.

DEAR ANNE:

I'm interested in repainting and decorating the bathroom of our house. It's an old one—gloomy looking because it's on the dark side of the house, toward the north with a lot of shade trees. What color scheme would you suggest?

K. K. G., Washington.

There's nothing sunnier and more cheerful than clear light yellow walls. You could repeat the yellow in shower and window curtains, adding a fluffy white rug and towels of brilliant blue or green to brighten the dreary room.

Another warm color you might use for the walls is soft pink. You could paint walls, woodwork, and ceiling in this flattering shade, then use smart powder blue or maroon accessories with it.

Job Is Open Reason for Hiding Age

By Ida Jean Kain

RETURNS on our age poll proved extremely interesting, for they covered every angle of the subject . . . whether women do or do not mind telling their age, and why.

Most of the women who said they worry not at all about mounting birthdays and don't even mind telling their right age (especially if they don't look it), are the married group and the non wage-earners.

The business women, by and large, also took a philosophical view of birthdays, but they emphasized that for obvious reasons it is the better part of wisdom not to reveal age, either by telling it or looking it. For example . . .

"I have never minded telling my age socially, but that is probably because everyone tells me I do not look it. In business, however, I believe 'over 21' is better than the whole truth. If I were to be looking for a job, I know my chances of employment would be slim if they knew that I am over 45, though I can turn out just as much work now as I did 15 years ago."

A Serious Note

THESE CONCLUSIONS were proved correct by other letters. The serious note was expressed by middle-aged women who must earn a living but find age an insurmountable barrier to getting a position. . . .

"I can now see why women do not want to reveal their age. For health reasons I took a leave of absence and my job was not held for me. I am past 50 and because of the age handicap find it impossible to get employment. If I had dyed my hair and tried to keep very young looking, I would be better off. I never tried to hide my age, and see where it got me. I say to all women who have to earn their living . . . keep up appearances and stay young as long as you can."

A more optimistic view came from an employment agency that stated if a woman looks young, has good health, and is thoroughly qualified for the job, these factors will outweigh age with a wise employer.

Summing it all up . . . If nothing else, our age poll has proved that vanity is by no means the main reason back of woman's reluctance to reveal her age.

ADVERTISING OPPORTUNITY

Here's a chance for someone from this year's crop of college graduates to get a toehold on the advertising ladder. To start, it's only a messenger's job at $30 a week. Within a few months—maybe weeks—the next step will be calling on the retail trade, doing merchandising. After that—probably advertising salesman, but maybe research or production of copy, depending on the man. This is really a good opportunity and we want to give it to the right man. Since it's primarily a stepping stone to selling advertising, don't apply unless you have a sales personality. If in doubt, you haven't.

ACREAGE, SALE 75

MARYLAND

ACREAGE—ACREAGE—ACREAGE

Would you like to know the man who has made more fortunes in acreage than any other man in Washington? Mr. Charles C. Glover, late president of the Riggs Nat'l Bank. He was a farm boy from one of the Carolinas. He sought employment in the old Corcoran & Riggs Bank and made good. And it was through his ability he formed the Riggs Nat'l Bank. He was not only the most successful buyer of acreage but he was successful in everything. I bought acreage from Mr. Glover in Chevy Chase at $3000 per acre that he bought at $70 an acre and now some of that same land after I developed it is worth $100,000 per acre. When I was building Chevy Chase, D. C., I received continuous letters from a man who wanted to sell me land in Bethesda, which is now the shopping center, at $500 per acre and it's now worth $100,000 an acre. I knew this land was cheap at $500 per acre at the time, but I had my hands full with Chevy Chase. Now I have some other acreage farther out in the same zone and I believe it will become a shopping center some day. This acreage is where the Bradley & River Roads merge together, overlooking the Congressional Country Club and this ground is now a great traffic center and where a traffic center comes shopping centers usually come. I have about a mile and half front on River & Bradley Roads in other words all front, only about 62 acres left. I am building my own home on the other. My home fronts River Road right opposite the entrance to the Congress C. C. This hill is the finest setting for a home in this part of the U. S. It is a far more beautiful setting than the White House where Mr. Truman lives. I am in my 84th year. I'm retiring my own estate; you could have the remainder of this acreage at 15¢ per sq. ft. if you take it all. I believe it will be worth $100,000 in time. River and Bradley Roads form 2 of the most important gateways to Washington. To give you an idea of what these gateways mean, the three gateways on the Virginia end of our 3 great bridges, all of that land and the shopping centers, all of it is worth $100,000 per acre. Do a little thinking, use your head and see if you can't make a fortune out of acreage. You can reach me at my home, WO. 0933, Fulton R. Gordon, Owner.

Godfrey's Barbershop Baritone Wins Sponsor

(Third of a Series)

By Jack O'Brian

The United States Coast Guard, savior of many a man capsized at sea, was the outfit that in 1929 steamed full speed ahead to save Arthur Godfrey from anonymity.

It was a Saturday night in that famous year that led into the depression but Arthur Godfrey was not thinking much of depressions, financial or psychiatric. He was having a fine time, surrounded by a crowd of his friends, engaging in two traditional Coast Guardsmen enthusiasms—lager and conversation.

The bluejackets were sitting around in a Baltimore speakeasy, sipping their suds and having fun. They were making a little too much noise for the proprietor, a man who had his ear close to a radio, an uncommon 1929 speakeasy furnishing, listening to a local Baltimore amateur hour called "Saturday Night Function."

As the barkeep listened to the sound of one of his neighbor's children bedeviling an innocent melody, he shushed his Coast Guard clientele several times.

Between being shushed by the barkeep and having to listen to the little monster torturing George Gershwin, they all got up to leave. One of Arthur Godfrey's buddies thereupon turned to him and said:

You can do better than that monkey—let's get out of here."

Came a chorus of assent from Godfrey's mates on both statements and before he could say he wouldn't he was whisked into a taxi and to the radio station.

Barbershop Baritone

This was no sudden, unexplainable whim of his shipmates.

Godfrey at the time was armed with the same sort of comfortable barbershop baritone he now utilizes to his high financial advantage. He also was a handy gent with a banjo, had a repertoire of lusty songs of the sea and soil, and even then, his voice had that unusual suggestive quality, virtually the vocal counterpart of a lifed eyebrow, never nasty, always fun.

With no more fanfare than that, Godfrey and his pals descended on the radio station. He was just as good as his buddies insisted. After several songs, the announcer invited him back again.

SEAGOING TROUBADOUR—Godfrey aboard Coast Guard destroyer Ammen in 1927. Joining the Coast Guard changed his whole future, placing him in Baltimore the night his first chance to get into radio presented itself

NIGHT-CLUBBING—Stepping another rung of the ladder, Godfrey played at Washington's Club Michel in 1934, five years after his radio debut at Baltimore. In his first radio job he got his "own price," $5 a program

The next week was even more successful, and Godfrey was handed—lovely phrase—a commercial program of his own. Not, of course, anything near the glittering 1 million dollars-a-year he makes now. But a local businessman—the Triangle Pet Shop—was looking for a 1929 version of Pinza at this own price—$5 a program. Billed as "Red Godfrey, the Warbling Banjoist," Godfrey was glad to get it.

Godfrey remained the pet shop's pet until a few weeks later when the announcer failed to show up, not a strange defection in those haphazard radio days. Arthur simply took over himself, announced his own selections, plunked his own banjo, grew ecstatic about bird seed, canine toenail clippers and other such elegances, and as he left the studio, was grabbed by the station manager.

Envisioning an end to his career, Godfrey had no time to stammer an explanation before the manager informed him:

"You talk at least 50 times better than you sing. If you want an announcing job, you're on the payroll."

Arthur did, and boarded radio's payroll, never to leave it. Thus began one of the most fabulous careers in the history of entertainment.

Godfrey and the Coast Guard by coincidence were going their separate ways after his hitch, and he dug in at the Baltimore station to learn the ropes, or wires.

A year of experience there and he felt ready to slay larger dragons, this one in Washington, as a staff announcer at the NBC station. But a shattering accident halted his career temporarily.

Forty-seven fractures sent him to a hospital for six months of reflective study of radio spieling. He did his listening almost by force. He wanted to see what made radio spieling insistent on its formal, stiff-shirted, double-breasted habits. He left the hospital limping, but he took with him the desire never again to utter a fake British accent, another broad A.

And this can be said for Arthur Godfrey—he tried his technique the very first day back on the job! No period of adjustment was necessary. He'd been adjusted, back in the hospital.

"Lonesome Friend"

Convinced he was talking to a great number of single individuals rather than one great crowd of people, Godfrey took his new theory right to the microphone. No more of that stilted, "Good evening, ladies and gentlemen . . ."

Quietly, as if talking directly to some lonesome friend in some hall bedroom a couple of feet away, he said with simple sincerity: "Good evening."

He sounded as if he really meant it, as if he hoped that indeed it was a good evening, not just a bit of expendable rhetoric. But—the sudden change was too much for his bosses. The chief announcer came running in to pull Arthur away from the mike.

"Old man, you just haven't got it anymore," he said, patting the redhead on the shoulder. "Maybe you should rest a little longer?"

After extended discussion, mostly in rising tones, Godfrey went back on the air, this time at an early morning hour considered safe by the management, which thought no one possibly would be listening. They cautioned Godfrey anyway, and he remained their good little boy—for four days.

On the fifth, Arthur suddenly discovered he was fed up with the record being spun a few minutes after seven a. m. There was the unmistakable sound of the record being broken into bits and then the easy, baritone voice, edged with good humored sarcasm:

"Ain't that the silliest thing you ever heard of," dropping the first preposition-ending of his radio career.

"Here I'm playing 'The William Tell Overture' at 7 o'clock when what we really need is a little peace and quiet."

Having dared that far, Godfrey thought he might as well go all the way. A derisive bleacher-style sound was heard being dedicated to Godfrey's boss, who, he added, certainly would not be up that early to hear.

"If he does, I won't be here tomorrow," he laughed.

"I almost hoped I'd be fired," Godfrey said.

"But I wasn't. The guy had a sense of humor, I guess, because he dropped by a day or so later and said he'd been told I was a funny guy and that he'd have to get up early some day to see for himself."

And that was the simple, impudent beginning of the Arthur Godfrey legend.

Washington never was famous for planned amusement and the refreshing Godfrey style became a local favorite. He began to be compared to Will Rogers, to Huck Finn. He had a little something to say about any subject on the face of a newspaper. Nothing big, just little edgy, cheerful opinions that poked fun but didn't bring blood. It was the ordinary guy hearing the things he'd like to have thought of himself. And the ordinary guy loved it.

With listeners, as the night the day, followed the sponsors. A waiting line presently began patiently to take its turn on Godfrey's program.

He decided to set standards of his own, in the bargain, and refused to accept a product he didn't think gave listeners fair value.

His bureau of standards was simple. No big laboratory. Godfrey just tried everything himself. If it was a pudding, he ate it, smacked his lips if it was good and accepted it, or chased the man with the money away if it was bad.

Gets Mouthful of Gum

Once a manufacturer hopefully sent Godfrey a carton of chewing gum. The redhead stuck a stick or two in his mouth and discovered it was turning into almost dusty lumps. He sent it back with his reasons attached.

Horrified, the manufacturer rushed through a laboratory examination which turned up the fact that Godfrey was right and that some necessary ingredient had been dropped from the gum in the carton sent for Arthur's approval. He quickly ran off another, sped it along with an apology and a plea for one more Godfrey try.

That time it was fine, a stenographer's delight. But Godfrey thought the management deserved some penalty anyway, so he put the gum on probation for another 13 weeks, a traditional radio sweating-out period, while he gave it a good, extended personal chomping. Then, satisfied, he accepted the sponsor's money.

It was during this period that Godfrey happened upon what now is considered his "trademark," kidding the commercials.

Never, of course, does he poke fun at a product.

Always it's the advertising copy, or the rich full syntax of a company's official motto that strikes his interest in the ridiculous.

It's a style of humor so direct, so honest, that the woman home peeling her onions and listening to Godfrey's morning show feels in her heart he is her friend. In return, the national sisters of the skillets are making Godfrey a millionaire. Slowly, of course, what with taxes, but a millionaire nevertheless.

TOMORROW: Walter Winchell discovers Arthur Godfrey and tells Mr. and Mrs. America and all the ships at sea.

YOU CAN'T KEEP HIM DOWN—A grinning Godfrey broadcasts from his Washington hospital bed in 1942 after having his appendix removed. A nurse keeps tabs on his pulse and "Girl Friday," Margaret (Mug) Richardson, joins in the hilarity. It was another hospital experience, with 47 fractures, which brought Godfrey his inspiration of broadcasting to one person at a time

What's CBS's Reason For All Those Panels?

By John Crosby

THE Columbia Broadcasting System has gone panel-happy to an almost psychopathic degree. The symptoms first became noticeable with "This Is Show Business" when CBS lined up George Kaufman, Abe Burrows and a guest to comment on the decidedly phoney problems of singers, dancers, actresses and an occasional trained dog.

That was the beginning. It has got much worse. Nowadays, CBS can't seem to produce any new shows without lining up four ladies and gentlemen of varying degrees of distinction to act as a jury.

The signer sings. The actress emotes. The dog stands on his hind legs. The panel is then asked to pass judgment. Without exception everyone agrees that the singer combines the best qualities of Crosby and Melchior, the actress makes Lynn Fontanne look pallid by comparison, the dog—well, there hasn't been such a magnificent animal since Man o' War.

What, I keep asking myself, brought on this strange mental state, CBS? Stretch out on the sofa there. Dr. Crosby would like to ask a few questions. Do you suppose this is a form of self-reassurance, these panels? Isn't it possible that you are surrounding yourself with panels to deceive yourself into thinking these singers, these actresses, these dogs are much better than they obviously are? Self-hypnosis, in short, acting on a state of acute retrogressive inferiority?

Herring for Listener?

LET'S take another tack. Isn't is just possible you are recruiting all these distinguished people in an attempt—either conscious or subconscious—to deceive me into thinking these singers, these actresses, these dogs are topflight entertainment? Now, I think we're getting somewhere.

Suppose among your jurors you have Helen Hayes who rhapsodizes about the effect of a young actress of no discernible talent. What is the intended effect—on the listener? Aren't you rather hopeful this praise from so distinguished a person will blind the audience to the actress' real merits or lack of them?

And yet you can hardly blame Miss Hayes for softening the blow. She is planted in front of cameras, microphones, an audience and—above all—in front of the entertainers themselves. Under such circumstances, candor would be monstrously discourteous.

In times past—way, way past—nothing stood between the entertainer and the home audience. He delivered the joke and the man at home made up his own mind. Then, came the audience with its yaks, its wild applause, which was designed to modify the opinion of the home audience. A joke which caused such uproar must—according to this line of specious reasoning—be a very good joke indeed.

Emcee Included

WELL, I'm getting a long way from the subject which was to have been "Songs for Sale" a new CBS show you'll find at 9 p. m., EDT., Fridays. "Songs for Sale" is a musical program designed to introduce talented songwriters who have not succeeded in getting their works published. These unsung songs are given a professional airing by vocalists Rosemary Clooney, a very expert young lady, and Tony Bennett about whom I have grave doubts; and by Ray Bloch's orchestra. So far so good. But wait. Wait.

A panel goes with it. Also an emcee. The emcee is Jan Murray, a hearty fellow, full of quips that almost, but not quite, succeed in obliterating the new songs. On the opening program the panel was composed of a singer, Kay Armen; a composer and conductor, Richard Himber; a song writer, Bob Hilliard; and a music publisher, Lester Santley.

"A songwriter," said Mr. Murray, "is a man who earns $1,000,000 a year, has a chauffeur and butler, sits on Park Avenue and writes a song called 'It Isn't Fair'."

Mr. Hilliard sang his own song, "Dearie." For the benefit of Mr. Himber, who wrote "It Isn't Fair." Mr. Bennett sang "It Isn't Fair." And for Mr. Santley who published "My Foolish Heart," the orchestra played it. Miss Armen sang "St. Louis Blues." In the intervals, they discussed their careers.

The DISTRICT LINE by Bill Gold

The Guy Is Definitely Draft-Exempt

I went out to the Fort Dupont Golf Course by myself the other day, and the starter (a most efficient gent, by the way) teamed me up with three strangers, to make a foursome.

As we waited our turn to tee off, we discussed the war news. "It looks pretty serious, doesn't it?" said a lad of perhaps 19.

"Yes, it does," agreed one of the others. "Are you worried about being drafted?"

"Not me," said the young fellow brightly. "I'm in the Air Force."

ADVICE FOR THE NATS

Bob Haas of 2963 McKinley st. nw., notes that Washington pitchers have been giving up too many runs in the first inning.

Then they settle down and pitch in creditable fashion. But the damage has been done.

Bob suggests that our moundsmen can get rid of that bad inning before the game starts. Instead of warming up in the bullpen, they ought to pitch in batting practice against the Washington sluggers.

That way they can take their "first inning" lumps without giving the enemy any runs.

Bob's idea is certainly more practical than the only alternative—which would be to eliminate the first inning entirely, and start with the second.

I'm reminded of the little railroad out West that had so many accidents involving the last cars on its trains that it was finally forced to take the last car off each train.

THAT'S RIGHT; USE THAT LEFT

The other day I made reference to young men who drive with one arm when they're accompanied by their girl friends.

The Keystone Automobile Club of 1643 Connecticut ave. nw. has some comments about people who drive with one arm for less romantic reasons.

For example, there's the roof gripper. He drives with his right and uses the left solely for keeping a tight grip on the roof of his car.

Then there's the pointer, who cannot describe places of interest to his passengers, but must point out the window at them.

And there's also the dangler, who just lets his left arm dangle in the airstream at the side of the car. This is a peachy technique for cooling off a left arm.

But it is also very confusing to other motorists, who are naive enough to think that an arm extended from the left side of a moving auto is supposed to be a signal, as required by law.

Since I bought a car with Hydra-Matic, I've found little use for my left foot. But my left hand has been mighty useful on the steering wheel at times, and I think I'll just continue to keep it there.

GIVE-AWAYS

"Young mother cat, expert mouser, and three adorable 7-week-old kittens." (Temple 6396.)

"Obedient 2-year-old fox terrier; I'm gong overseas." (Kenmore 3-4931 after 6 p. m.)

"Black mother cat and three cute 7-week-old kittens; will deliver." (Wisconsin 1127.)

"Two gentle mother cats and several assorted kittens." (Ordway 2286.)

"Complete file of Architectural Forum magazines for more than three years." (Victor 4586.)

"Two-month-old part-cocker puppy, female." (Hobart 5941.)

"Well-mannered mother cat and six 5-week-old kittens." (Sligo 0120.)

"Playful, affectionate 3-month-old kitten." (Jackson 4-0057.)

"Mother cat and two housebroken 6-week-old kittens." (Woodley 7018 between 4 and 6 p. m.)

"Two identical gray-and-black striped kittens." (Sligo 1727.)

"Two 8-week-old male kittens; one 14-week-old male kitten." (Taylor 7578 between 9 a. m. and 2 p. m.)

THIS IS WASHINGTON

Charlie Williams of 1405 53d ave., Hillside, Md., who drives a District Cab, points out that two Washington streets change their names four times within four blocks. You'll find them on either side of the White House.

East Executive ave. becomes Madison pl., then Vermont ave., and then 15th st. West Executive ave. changes first to Jackson pl., then to Connecticut ave., and finally to 17th st.

STREET SCENE

Maj. Charles S. Coulter of 4212 37th st. nw. reports that on a motorcycle bearing tag No. 375 he recently saw a policeman—wearing spurs.

LIFE-IS-LIKE-THAT DEPT.

Once in a blue moon, a motorist is lucky enough to park beside a "stuck" parking meter, which continues to show unexpired time in spite of an absence of nickels.

It happened to me the other day—on Sunday, to be exact—when nickels aren't needed anyhow.

VAGRANT THOUGHT

American Communists have suddenly become strong advocates of peace. What a pity they don't move to North Korea, where there's a serious shortage of peaceful Communists.

OLD-BUT-STILL-GOOD DEPT.

Then there's the one about the city feller who asked the farmer where he bathed. "In the spring," said Hiram. Whereupon his city visitor protested: "I asked you where, not when."

Battle Cites State Ban on Lotteries In Reply to Jury

Richmond, Va., July 10 (AP).—Lotteries are banned in Virginia by the State constitution rather than by statute, Governor Battle noted today. He noted, too, the difficulties in changing the constitution.

Otherwise, the Governor declined to comment on a Fredericksburg grand jury's recommendation Friday that the State lottery law be amended to permit fund-raising "auctions" for charity.

The Fredericksburg investigation followed receipt of a letter by the Governor from Alvin T. Embrey, an attorney in that city, charging that lotteries were being operated in Fredericksburg in violation of State law. The Governor turned the letter over to local authorities.

Behind the Scenes in Rail Strike

By Drew Pearson

Only a few insiders realized it but, at his last press conference, President Truman blithely tossed out the window a carefully nurtured plan for halting a Nation-wide rail strike.

Darby

Behind the scenes, Utah's scholarly Elbert Thomas, Senate Labor Committee chairman, together with Wayne Morse, who settled the 1941 Nation-wide rail strike just before Pearl Harbor, had pleaded with Mr. Truman to follow a path they had smoothed out—namely, an appeal to the patriotism of the switchmen to go back to work. Instead, the President went along with the suggestion of Harry Darby, the freshman Republican Senator from Kansas. Unsmiling, he curtly announced that the striking switchmen should get back on the job, or the Government would take drastic action.

Senators Thomas and Morse, one a Democrat, the other a Republican, had urged Mr. Truman to handle the switchmen's strike and the threatened trainmen and conductors' strike, set for July 15, all as one problem.

"The brotherhoods don't want to strike," Senator Thomas told the President. "The railroads have the union in exactly the same position the mine operators had John Lewis the last time. An appeal from you would keep the trains moving."

Senator Morse, in a separate talk with Truman, said virtually the same thing. Both Senators had received private assurances from brotherhood representatives in advance that such an appeal would do the trick, and there would be no strike. What they wanted was not a threat from the White House but a presidential message which they could relay to their members and use an excuse for "no strike."

Sen. Darby Intercedes

To both Thomas and Morse, the President said, "talk to John"—referring to John Steelman, White House assistant on labor matters. Steelman, in turn, suggested that a lesser figure than the President make the appeal to the rail unions. He did not believe the President should have to intervene personally in every strike.

Before the matter was finally settled, however, hale and hearty Harry Darby, one of the most popular men on Capitol Hill, called at the White House, bluntly told the President that the switchmen's strike had held up the movement of Midwest grain.

"Why don't you tell them to go back to work, or you'll step in, and no nonsense?" advised Senator Darby, who is a director of the struck Rock Island Railroad.

Mr. Truman agreed this was the thing to do and at his press conference that was what he did.

Note—Ironically, the switchmen's strike was called off against four of the five Western railroads, but not against the Rock Island, of which Senator Darby is a director. The union announced it would continue the Rock Island strike as a test case, but President Truman then seized the railroad.

Unforgotten statements made last January which some Congressmen would like to forget:

REPRESENTATIVE ROBERT CHIPERFIELD, ILLINOIS REPUBLICAN—"In my judgment, to furnish (Korean) aid would be like treating a hangnail on one's finger when the arm was swollen with poison from the wrist to the shoulder."

REPRESENTATIVE DONALD JACKSON, CALIFORNIA REPUBLICAN—"South Korea is a Bataan without a Corregidor, a Dunkerque without a flotilla, a dead-end street without an escape."

REPRESENTATIVE JOHN M. VORYS, OHIO REPUBLICAN—"This (Korean aid) is strictly rathole money which we cannot afford."

REPRESENTATIVE LAWRENCE SMITH, WISCONSIN REPUBLICAN—"Our taxpayers are entitled to some consideration. This (Korean aid) is absolutely 'operation rathole.' It will be said, of course, that this is demagoguery, but if that be demagoguery, make the most of it."

STATEMENT THAT CONGRESSMAN NIXON WOULD LIKE TO HAVE FORGOTTEN: One of the few who vigorously championed aid to Korea when the House first voted against it last January was Congresswoman Helen Gahagan Douglas of California, sometimes charged by her opponent, GOP Congressman Nixon, of being too friendly to the Reds. Said Mrs. Douglas:

"We have a three-year program to help the southern half of Korea to be independent and self-supporting. If we abandon them we can be sure that in two or three months they will collapse, which will mean that the Communist forces will take over, and all of Korea will then come under a Communist government—and Russian influence.

"This is the only foothold we have in northeastern Asia. Is it worth the gamble or not? It seems to me very emphatically that it is."
